Japan Should Watch Russia. What Would You Think, Say?

A New Miracle.

All Cheer Up.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

VICE ADMIRAL SUETSUGO, commander of Japan's combined fleets, is supposed to have said that the United States was trying to "encircle Japan" in a hostile way and that Japan and the United States would surely have war. The United States of course would be the aggressor.

Very probably Admiral Suetsugo was quoted incorrectly. Men in high station rarely talk foolishly in Japan.

INSTEAD OF dreaming dreams and seeing visions concerning United States hostility, which does not exist, the wise Japanese will concentrate on danger close at home, on the edge of Manchukuo, namely the Russian danger.

Mr. E. L. Cord, who manufactures airplanes, quotes excellent authority to the effect that Russia at this moment his six factories manufacturing airplanes, any one of them bigger than all the airplane factories in the United States put together.

RUSSIA IS working at airplanes of every type, especially on giant planes for long journeys, non-stop. Millions of young men in Russia have been made to study aeronautics, tens of thousands of them have been taught the actual handling of an airplane.

If any danger confronts Japan it is Russia, not well-meaning, good-natured United States, which asks only to be left alone.

AT THE same time, the fact that six planes of the American Navy flew in formation from California to Hawaii, 2,400 miles in 24 hours, interests the world generally.

An Italian statesman, trying "to make our flesh creep," told us the other day that Japan would surely attack the United States soon, and it would take American ships twelve days to go from California to the Japanese coast.

That would depend on what kind of ships we might use. Going over the Pacific, 2,400 miles in 24 hours, would not take long to reach any part of the coast of Asia.

THE QUESTION "What would you say, what would you think, what would you do, IF," has been put in a thousand ways.

It was put in a new way to Herman Cunningham, one of three Negroes killed in Sing Sing's electric chair just before midnight on Thursday.

Two men that had helped him commit murder, had sat down in the chair and been taken out dead, when Cunningham's turn came.

The electrician threw the switch. Nothing happened. An electrode was loose. Cunningham sat and waited for four minutes while it was adjusted. Then the current came rushing in at the top of his shaven skull and out through the calf of his leg.

What do you suppose he thought about during those four minutes?

What would YOU have thought, waiting for that current to come?

In older, more sentimental days some one in authority might have said:

"It is a sign. Providence has evidently interfered, go free."

These are not sentimental days.

TOMORROW IN Rome, the Pope, broadcasting, will solemnly announce that Mother Thouret, healer and educator during the period of the French Revolution, has been honored by the addition of her name to the ranks of Catholic saints.

Can anyone imagine the surprise of the heroic Mother Thouret, if she had been told 150 years ago, that some day:

"Your name will be added to the list of holy saints, and a Pope in a future century, announcing the great honor, will be heard instantaneously all around the world."

Miracles did not end after the Bible was written.

EDSEL FORD, who does not easily become depressed, or unduly elated, says the outlook for this year, 1934, is "very, very good." His father's company expects a pickup of 75 per cent in business.

Mr. Ford is convinced that "so far as automobiles are concerned," business prospects are extraordinarily good, and his opinion is confirmed by the opinions of all other important men in the automobile industry.

SEVERAL WEEKS ago Edward Grossman, war veteran, and his wife decided to die by gas. The husband died, the wife was rescued. Since then Mrs. Grossman has tried twice to kill herself. The second time, yesterday, she succeeded.

Sitting on the floor with the gas turned on, Mrs. Grossman wrote short notes to her dead husband, every five minutes, telling of the effects of the flowing gas, and mentioning the fact that, as she slowly died, she was sipping champagne, and whisky, when the champagne was gone.

Newspapers will all print this because suicides rarely sip champagne and whisky as they die.

The average human being would prefer to go out of the world thinking clearly.

Vallee Records of Fay's Talks Revealed

AIR CROONER DENIES HE WILL ASK DIVORCE

N.Y. Sees Action Based On His Wife's Chats With Dancer

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 13.—"I have never thought of a divorce and am not now seeking a divorce," Rudy Vallee, radio crooner, said today after he had heard with a gleeful smile that the injunction proceedings brought by his pretty wife, Fay Webb Vallee, had failed to win the approval of the New York Appellate Court. Vallee added:

"I was glad to hear the decision of the court. It was what I expected but I was particularly gratified that the decision of the court was unanimous because it upholds my side of the case."

Mrs. Vallee sought the injunction to restrain Vallee from possibly seeking a divorce in Mexico.

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Filing of a divorce action by Rudy Vallee, crooning orchestra maestro, against Fay Webb Vallee today was anticipated by Broadway.

This followed in the wake of action by the Supreme Court Appellate Division in denying Mrs. Vallee's petition for an injunction restraining the singer from seeking a Mexican divorce.

Although friends of Vallee have declined to discuss the case for publication, privately expressed opinion was that the crooner would move for a divorce as soon as the pending separate maintenance suit lodged against Vallee in California is disposed of.

Revealing intimate details of Fay's alleged friendship with Garfield (Gary) Leon, football player turned adagio dancer, Vallee's answer to the injunction suit was made public by the court, and the document sent a spasm of ex-

HENRY, M'NAIR CONFER ON JOB

John M. Henry, offered the job of Public Safety Director, was in conference with Mayor William N. McNair today.

Neither Henry nor McNair would comment, but it was understood no decision was reached on whetier Henry will accept. A decision was expected today or tomorrow.

Henry, defeated by McNair in the primary, at first appeared to shy away from the offer of the safety post, but it has been learned that many of his friends have been urging him to accept it and that he has been listening to their entreaties.

Henry's friends, it is said, have talked with enough Councilmen to satisfy themselves that his appointment would be confirmed were it submitted promptly to Council.

Henry vowed during his campaign that if he received the opportunity he would rip the police and fire bureaus out of politics.

With the appointment of James F. Malone apparently blocked by the four Democratic Councilmen and William J. Soost, there is a possibility that Henry's name might go to Council Monday.

If Henry is appointed, it will not be through the influence of County Chairman David L. Lawrence and Joseph F. Guffey. He has frequently been at odds with those two leaders.

JAPS OCCUPY CHINESE CITY

SHANGHAI, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Nationalist government marines landed in Foochow and occupied the city today after the 19th Army had withdrawn before the advance of Nanking forces, said navy dispatches from Foochow.

The dispatches said slight disorder accompanied the shift in authority, causing a Japanese cruiser anchored at Mamoi, below Foochow, to land a company of Japanese marines.

FOOCHOW, China, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—The famous 19th Route Army fighting for the rebel cause in Fukien Province was reported in retreat today before the nationalist government forces of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek.

STATE TO BOOST LIQUOR PRICES

'CHISELING' ON CWA MEN PROBED

Federal and State Investigations Launched

Evidence revealed by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph of a union attempt to chisel into the little fellow's CWA pay and charges of political wire-pulling in obtaining CWA jobs brought promise today of a thorough investigation of racket methods in Allegheny County in connection with civil works activities.

Documentary proof uncovered by the Sun-Telegraph that at least one labor union demanded an agreement providing a 50-50 split on the CWA workers' wages, else no job, set the spark to the inquiry at Washington and Harrisburg.

The union set up the agreement as a means of collecting dues in arrears.

HOPKINS ORDERS QUIZ

Civil Works Administrator Harry L. Hopkins at Washington ordered the investigation.

One instance of union pressure brought on a CWA workman, revealed today, was this:

A man long out of work was forced to borrow $10 for reinstatement in his union before he was permitted to go to work on the University of Pittsburgh's Cathedral of Learning.

Others working on the Cathedral were compelled to sign contracts with the union agreeing to pay half of their wages to the union.

These were destitute men, many of whom had not worked in several years.

An official of their union local said the economic status of the men was taken into consideration in enforcing the terms of the

BROOKS HEADS HOUSING BOARD

The first step toward obtaining a government housing project for Pittsburgh has been taken in the appointment of Frank F. Brooks, president of the First National Bank, as chairman of a central committee to co-ordinate all plans.

This course was taken at the suggestion of Robert D. Kohn, federal housing director, who stressed the need for action by such a committee in a speech last night at the Hotel Schenley.

Kohn yesterday toured Pittsburgh's slums with Sir Raymond Unwin, British housing expert, and attended conferences with civic groups.

PROJECTS STUDIED

Following a meeting with the Mayor and City Council, it was learned unofficially that several private housing projects in Pitts-

R. K. MELLON DENIES AIR MONOPOLY

Family Has Only 2,400 Shares in Aviation Firm, He Says

The Mellon aviation monopoly, so-called, about which so much has been said before the Senatorial air mail investigation committee, amounts to a mere 5 per cent interest in the Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Corporation, it was revealed here today by R. K. Mellon, son of the late R. B. Mellon.

The total holdings of the entire Mellon family, which includes R. K., W. L. and the estate of the late R. B. Mellon, amounts to 2,400 shares of Pittsburgh Aviation Industries stock, the younger Mellon declared.

NO OTHER STOCK

The Mellons and their banks own no stock in either of the other two aviation companies, Pennsylvania Airlines, Inc., or Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., which are operating with government air mail subsidy, the family spokesman declared.

Pennsylvania Airlines is a subsidiary operation of Pittsburgh Aviation Industries, which also owns 5 per cent of the stock of Transcontinental and Western Air, but the Mellon interest in these concerns amounts to only a fraction more than 5 per cent of the P. A. I. C. holdings, the younger financier points out.

Theodore Taney, former vice president of Pittsburgh Airways, who was quoted as having testified before the Senate committee that the "Mellons" had "chiseled" on the aviation business and forced his company into bankruptcy, explained his remarks today as not having been directed at the Mellons directly.

He said he referred specifically to George R. Hann, president of Pittsburgh Aviation Industries, who, he declared, was "a Mellon man."

DENIES DOMINATION

R. K. Mellon, while admitting friendship of long standing between himself and President Hann, denied vehemently that there was any Mellon domination in that affiliation.

The younger Mellon was asked:

"Do the Mellon interests wield any power over either Pennsylvania Airlines, Pittsburgh Aviation Industries or Transcontinental and Western Air directly

Talk of War by Japan or U. S. Is Ridiculous, Says R. W. Child; Sees Profit for Both in Peace

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

Noted Author and Ambassador to Italy Under Two Administrations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.

JAPAN!

The remarks made yesterday, that have already been made, that are being made under the surface and that may be made in Congress about Japan, constitute a playing with matches. In most cases this playing with matches is by individuals who are irresponsible pocket lighters. This is the opinion of those Senators whose experience and thoughtfulness have passed the green apple stage and whose comments if any will not give this country and the alarmist press, war colic.

Combined with Japanese eruptions in writings and speeches from professional militarists overseas who depend upon an overtaxed Japanese population for more appropriations and further adoration, there may be created a new and childish cause for war about equal in dignity to a quarrel at a marital breakfast table, i.e., CONFLICT BY TALK.

Every word said in Japan about attacking the United States stirs up a new word here about the "peril" of Japan, and everyone of these words starts a new word in Japan about the supposed meddling and teasing and hidden motives of the United States. If the breakfast table—the Pacific Ocean—were not so broad that it is hard to reach a cheek, the next step would be a slap and the slap might lead to grabbing the fruit knife and the fruit knife might lead to what the criminal reporters call a "mate murder."

IF WE CAN eliminate this cause for war, what others remain? The most modern—economic competition? Let our Congress consider that Japan is one of our best customers and keeps a balance of trade so that she can pay without credit. Which is better—to sell her southern cotton and other exports or send ultimatums, irritations and meddlings and insults?

The open door in Asia? How in this modern world can Japan close it? To provide Asia with converted manufacturers, Japan will have to buy from us. In the next 25 years, she will want our co-operation in financing, in raw materials, in joint action to develop purchasing power on Asia's mainland.

Conquest of territory aside for the moment—every import of Japanese finance or management, of her example of stability, even of her goods onto Asia's mainland is money in the American pocket.

Asia's return to good order, her restored and expanded communications, her peace from eternal and futile and silly revolution and corruption and disintegration and Communism and intrigue, her population gone back to honest productive work—these are all dollars in the American pocket because they are dollars in the pockets of the Chinese, the Manchurians and the Koreans—purchasing power.

IF IN THE process Japanese immigration goes to the mainland to relieve Japan's overpopulated, war-encouraging bursting point, so much the better!

Quarrelling about who is to have the lion's share of the purchasing power arising from order and peace and production on Asia's mainland is quarrelling about who shall put meat on the bones of a great future market and a restored civilization and an improved people. What we want is the meat—material, spiritual and humane—on the bare bones of a distressed mainland. So long as Japan is a friendly factor in putting fat on, rather than stripping those aching bones, we should be her co-operator.

This is something that the President may well point out in private contacts with this Congress. The "open door" may be our traditional policy but there comes a time when we must ask ourselves whether it is better to quarrel over an empty platter or co-operate to put something on it.

Conquest of territory? The world—just read the European press—which is trying to divert attention from European war menace—recognizes that Japan is "invading" the mainland. The wise know that she is doing it for an outlet for her bursting population and to create a buffer between herself and what she considers the menace of disorder and Communism and what she sees as a Russian giant at her back door.

Let us be realists! Who will stop her? The League? It tried with a feather-duster. Any European power? On the contrary they are in competition with each other not to do so.

Will the United States leap into the breach and be the cat's-paw for powers shrewder than we are? We must remember that in this case that every word to be worth a nickel must have fifteen million dollars worth of fighting ship behind it.

WHEN T. R. was presented with a huge petition to "free Korea" from Japan by sending notes he said he would not read it unless the petition also asked for a sacrifice of several hundred thousand American lives and some billions of dollars.

Probably the one thing to stop Japan is the prohibitive cost to her conquest, and the impossible task of going much further than she has already gone.

Other cause for war?

Designs of Japan upon our Pacific islands? Are these "designs," many of which are created in our own speculation, too expensive for Japan to carry out? European experts and impartial statesmen believe that such "designs" are the most costly luxury with which Japan, with Russia at her back, can indulge herself.

Every Congressman and Senator should correctly estimate that cost and make the cost higher and better by providing us with the peace-making insurance of an adequate Navy built to replace the feeble incompetence of our present break-down.

Aside from a lack of cause for war, minding our own busi-

FEDERAL TAX BLAMED FOR INCREASE

New Charges Will Go Into Effect on Jan. 22

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 13.—Prices in the state liquor stores will be raised Monday, January 22, because of increased federal taxes, the State Control Board announced today.

New prices were not announced by the board.

Congress has just passed a bill boosting federal taxes on liquor from $1.10 a gallon to $2 a gallon, an increase of 22½ cents a quart. No state taxes are assessed against liquor sold in the state stores.

East Liberty Liquor Store Shy of Many Brands

If the customer is always right, the state liquor store that opened today at 5934 Baum boulevard, in the shadow of the Mellon-donated East Liberty Presbyterian Church, will have to stock up.

The first customer, who gave his name as Jerry L. London, of Winterburn avenue, didn't get what he wanted.

He said to a clerk:

"I want some Three Star Hennessy."

The clerk replied:

"We're sorry, but we don't have it."

"Well, give me White Horse."

"Sorry, we don't have that either."

"It's on your list."

"Sorry it's not in the warehouse and we can't get it."

"Well, give me a bottle of port and a bottle of sherry. I hope this isn't an example of what the liquor stores will be like."

He paid $2 and departed.

Stores also opened today at 340 Boulevard of the Allies and 3700 Butler street in Pittsburgh; at 414-416 Walnut street, McKeesport, and 56-58 North First street, Duquesne.

ACTS TO QUASH COYNE CHARGE

Asserting that the new state liquor act repeals the Snyder Act, with no retroactive provision for enforcement of the latter, Attorney John Duggan, Jr., has filed a motion to quash the liquor indictment against Tom Coyne, one of "Three Toms" facing trial in the Monaca Club case.

Duggan also contends in his motion filed late yesterday before Judge S. J. Snee that the Snyder Act became unconstitutional with enactment of the Twenty-first (repeal) Amendment.

Judge Snee will hear arguments on the motion probably Tuesday.

District Attorney A. T. Park has announced he will prosecute all liquor cases which originated prior to repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Coyne is also indicted on a charge of keeping a gambling house, along with Tom Goslin and Tom Dolan.

Butler's Ball Puts Baer in Society

It's Only by Proxy, But It Delights Famed 'Bugs'

Bugs Baer, the nation's favorite humorist, and most of New York's other notables who are still out of jail and have butlers; were minus their butlers last night. New York had its first butler's ball, organized by Mrs. Marshall Field and others of the socially elect, in emulation of a similar affair held annually in London. Bugs sought a report on the proceedings from his butler with the following results.

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

(Copyright, 1934, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—We sent Barlow over to the butlers' ball last night and he came back early in worse shape than a shredded cod.

We heard a terrific short wave commotion in the pantry. Barlow was beating our empty pearl gray spats with a baseball bat.

He yelled:

"Help! I've captured the invisible man."

Seems that Barlow had looked upon the wine from his own cellar.

When giving Barlow permission to go to the ball we had instructed him to ask the Vanderbilt's second man to give Harry Whitney's third chauffeur our regards. The Baer dynasty goes back plenty. We have a piano that has been in the family for almost 17 instalments.

But, it seems there was some unpleasantness. The Atterbury's airplane dispatcher referred to Barlow's neat sideburns as roach ladders.

His Bibulous Menial Captures Invisible Man in Pantry

Then, the Marshall Fields' sixth station announcer was caught waiting upon himself with two platters. That's very selfish butlerism.

Barlow will not be much good at butlering for a week. He never is after he hands somebody his hat and coat with our initials on them.

However, we are glad that we mingled by proxy with the Morgans, the Kahns, the Skiddy Von Stades and the Appledocks.

AVIATION VETERANS TO GO UNLESS ROPER IS BALKED

POLITICS SEEN IN FIRING OF EXPERTS

Congressional Action, Public Protest Only Hopes for Force

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Unless a Congressional investigation or the force of public protests stay his hand, Secretary of Commerce Roper will deliver another crippling blow to the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce one week from today.

On that date—January 20—a departmental order will go into effect dismissing, by means of an indefinite furlough without pay, nearly all associate airways engineers, assistant airways engineers, airways radio engineers, junior civil engineers and patrol pilots assigned to the six airways district offices throughout the country.

These district offices are at Newark, Atlanta, Chicago, Fort Worth, Salt Lake City and Oakland, Cal.

Notice of this drastic action has already been sent to the district offices in a confidential telegram from the airways division office in Washington.

VETERANS TO GO

Most of these airways engineers, technicians and patrol pilots have been engaged in airways surveys, construction and maintenance since the aeronautics branch was established in 1926. The service of some of the older veterans dates back to the "old postoffice days" of the airmail.

All these veterans of the airways division were originally selected solely for their ability and experience in their own particular line of work, which is highly technical.

During the building up of the federal airways system, they have acquired extensive knowledge of the best method of maintaining these airways so that they will provide the highest degree of safety to the general public, the air traveling public and the air transport industry.

POLITICS BROUGHT IN

These veterans were never asked what their political affiliations were until they were told, a few months ago, they had better get political recommendations if they hoped to hold their jobs. This some of them succeeded in doing, but all supposed it was a matter of form.

Until the last six months, the aeronautics branch has been administered as a highly technical service and selections and promotions have been made as impartially as in the Bureau of Standards.

The confidential notice sent out from the Department of Commerce on January 3 to the six airways district offices gives no reason for the coming reduction. It simply announces that "in conformance with reorganization plan" dismissals enumerated will take place on January 20.

NEW CHIEFS NAMED

Several weeks ago new offices were created in each of the six airways districts and these offices were filled with assistant superintendents who are said to owe their appointments to political recommendations.

The coming reorganization is the latest of a number which Secretary Roper has been making in this hitherto non-political branch of the Department of Commerce, since the expert heads of all its divisions were eliminated following the retirement last June of Col. Clarence Young as Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics.

ROOSEVELT SET TO TAKE OVER GOLD SUPPLY

President to Call on Federal Reserve For Metal

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt was prepared today to take over the nation's largest heap of outstanding gold—that held by the Federal Reserve system—as a preliminary to eventual permanent devaluation of the dollar.

He is believed to want all of this basic monetary commodity in the Treasury, along with a proper proportion of silver, to insure the power of new moves affecting the nation-old monetary policy.

Just when the next step in the national managed currency program will come, Mr. Roosevelt is very carefully keeping to himself. One thing is certain, however: He intends to manage the new money program himself.

Arguments as to whether the administration could call in the Reserve system's gold were answered calmly by the President late yesterday with the declaration that he had the power, under the Thomas amendment, to order the entire $3,600,000,000 held into the Treasury's vaults.

This step is regarded as necessary by most monetary experts to insure that no outside profit would result from permanent devaluation of the dollar. This, of course, would result in an increased price for all the gold outstanding.

Meanwhile, both Senate and House chambers remained quiet due to week-end recess. Next week the Senate will take up the controverted St. Lawrence pact again and the House will turn to tax matters.

SENATE DROPS FORD TAX INQUIRY

Lack Jurisdiction In Case, Probers Decide

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Senate investigators disclosed today they had abandoned their inquiry into tax payments by the Ford Motor Company largely because of two Supreme Court decisions upholding Edsel Ford's contention that there had been no tax avoidance.

The inquiry was suddenly dropped yesterday despite the fact that a tax official from Detroit had been summoned under subpena to testify and was waiting in the committee room. He was released with the explanation the committee did not consider the tax case within the jurisdiction of the investigation.

$15,000,000 DEAL

The day previous, however, Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the investigating committee had caused a stir by placing in the record evidence that the motor company bought $15,000,000 of government securities on the last day of 1932 and sold them back four days later.

No one raised any question of the committee's jurisdiction as Pecora intimated one of the purposes of the transaction was to avoid payment of taxes under the Michigan property tax law.

Edsel Ford, on the stand at the time, denied the tax question entered into the transaction. He said the company had an opinion from the attorney general of the state to that affect. Later he told Pecora the Michigan law did not apply to the Ford company because it was incorporated in Delaware.

Members of the committee said today Pecora's staff had studied the law in the light of this contention and found two Supreme Court decisions upholding it.

CASE DIFFERENT

Senator Couzens (Rep.), of Michigan, a member of the committee, pointed out today the Ford tax case was different from the other taxation evidence received by the committee in that it was a question of state rather than federal taxes.

Chairman Fletcher said the committee had taken no formal action in connection with dropping the case.

WEIR DISPUTE HELD GRAVE BY NRA

Roosevelt Confers With Labor Chiefs On Case

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The NRA labor advisory board's dispute with the Weirton Steel Company of Pittsburgh has risen in importance in the eyes of the administration to where it is regarded as one of the major NRA test cases.

Involving as it does one of the vital principles of the Industrial Recovery Act—the right of labor to bargain collectively with employers—the controversy has been the subject of lengthy conferences at the White House, and the end is not yet in sight.

Chairman Robert Wagner, of the advisory board, who is also a Democratic Senator from New York, feels the steel company should be prosecuted as a result of its recent employes' election of representatives.

Charges that this election was carried out by a company, rather than an independent union, brought on the dispute and a thorough investigation of the affair by Justice Department operatives.

President Roosevelt has apparently advised Attorney General Cummings to proceed in the matter as he sees fit, and that he, the President, will not interfere. Mr. Roosevelt went over the whole case in a long conference with Cummings, Wagner, Recovery Administrator Hugh Johnson and Secretary of Labor Perkins.

Should Cummings feel that evidence collected by his operatives after the Weirton election warrants prosecution, it was assumed here today he has full authority to proceed. Conviction could have serious consequences for the steel company.

agreement, but admitted the contracts were made.

POLITICAL ANGLE

Along with the union practices, the federal-state CWA officials will look into the hiring of politicians, not necessarily in want, instead of destitute men without political influence.

This latter condition is virtually state-wide, according to charges voiced in other districts.

Hopkins referred complaints reaching him to Eric H. Biddle, Pennsylvania CWA administrator, and instructed him to take the matter up at once with the proper official here.

Biddle informed the Sun-Telegraph that the move in Washington for an investigation came without his having previous knowledge it was afoot. He said:

"I won't say I haven't heard complaints of this situation in my office. However, this is the first I knew that an investigation had begun."

James L. Stuart, Allegheny County administrator, likewise said the investigation was news to him. Concerning the union demand for an agreement on a wage split, he said:

"There's been some talk about it. Nothing definite understand; just rumors. I never considered investigating them.

"The whole thing is a surprise to me. If the unions are taking a large portion of the wages of these destitute men, it is a rotten situation and must be stopped."

The union contract was required by the Carpenters' District Council. M. D. Cashdollar, secretary-treasurer, said the terms of a 50-50 split with the union were not rigidly enforced.

In connection with disclosures that political job holders have CWA jobs, two Verona Borough councilmen—neither of whom receives pay for his councilmanic office—admitted they are foremen on CWA projects.

Men holding political offices without recompense may work on CWA jobs, but there is an order against giving them posts as foremen. This order is designed to keep politics out of executive positions.

The Verona Councilmen are Henry Hickinbottom and Alan MacGregor. They said they receive 65 cents an hour from the CWA.

Des Moines reports six inches of snow on the ground. Temperature changes were towards warmer over the Atlantic Coast states and towards colder over the Lower Ohio Valley states and westward over the plains states. The temperature will drop below freezing Sunday, but there is no severely cold weather indicated for the next several days.

BROOKS HEADS HOUSING BOARD

burgh are receiving consideration from the federal authorities.

These include the use of the Stanton Heights golf course, owned by the Schenley estate, for houses to be built by the W. T. Grange Construction Company, and a development in Pioneer avenue, South Hills, by Herman Kamin, builder.

A group of apartments in Marshall avenue near Brighton road has been sponsored by George E. Evans.

The conference at City Hall was held behind closed doors, and, according to unofficial sources, was marked by some differences of opinion.

M'NAIR REFUSES COMMENT

Mayor William N. McNair, following the meeting, declined to discuss it. He turned reporters over to City Solicitor Cornelius D. Scully, who talked briefly on the difficulties involved in slum clearance because of lack of the power of eminent domain in most agencies which could do the work.

From unofficial sources, it was learned that there was a difference of opinion between the Mayor and some of the Republican Councilmen on methods of acquiring sites. The Councilmen favored general public slum-razing projects, rather than private propositions.

Kohn urged that every effort be made to start a slum clearance program locally, and if that failed, the government might help, Joseph P. Tufts, director of the Pittsburgh Housing Association, who arranged the conference, announced the appointment of Brooks.

EAGLE ON ALIEN GOODS BANNED

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—All customs collectors throughout the nation today had been instructed by Assistant Treasury Secretary Gibbons to refuse entry to foreign-made goods bearing the NRA Blue Eagle insignia.

The order followed complaint Thursday by Recovery Administrator Johnson that 4,000 cases of Japan-made canned tuna fish bearing the NRA insignia had been landed at San Pedro, Cal.

Simultaneously information was filed with NRA alleging that more than a score of California importers have been placing the Blue Eagle on foreign-made goods. A sweeping investigation is under way.

Gibbons said his agents told him the Half Hill Company, Limited, Los Angeles importers, said the Blue Eagles were attached at the request of Samuel Kunin & Sons, to whom some of the fish was consigned. Half Hill also insisted, the customs agents reported, they told the Kunin firm they were getting Japanese tuna.

The Kunin firm told Johnson it had boycotted Japanese tuna and purchased only California pack, and said the firm knew absolutely nothing of any placing of Blue Eagles on imported fish.

Arnold Political Row Involves CWA

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Jan. 13.—An Arnold Borough political squabble is being enlivened by revelations that have dragged in the CWA projects. The matter will be referred to federal authorities, it is said.

"Mike" Nee, who, it is contended, saved the borough $12,000 on street work during the past three years, was ousted from office and his place given to Robert T. Parry. Nee's supporters say Parry draws a pension from the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company and was foreman of a CWA job at the time of his appointment.

Kaiser's Rheumatism Halts Woodchopping

DOORN, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—An attack of rheumatism in the legs has compelled former Kaiser Wilhelm II, of Germany, to forego his favorite outdoor exercise of woodchopping.

Although confined within his residence, the former ruler, who is approaching his seventy-fifth birthday, remains otherwise in good health. He keeps close watch on political developments in Germany.

RHINO AMUCK ON MOVIE LOT

CULVER CITY, Cal., Jan. 13.—(AP.)—An irate, 3,000-pound female rhinoceros ran amuck at M. G. M. movie studio yesterday, endangered the lives of Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan and battered a heavy cage containing a camera crew during a scene in a jungle picture, the studio reported.

Weissmuller and Miss O'Sullivan were able to reach the shelter of a fence as the beast, named "Mary," charged.

The rhino butted into the camera cage, however, and badly shook up Bob Roberts, veteran of an African film expedition, Lester White, Ellsworth Fredericks, Ray Ramsey and William Foxall.

An hour of production time was lost while trainers worked to get "Mary" back into her "dressing room" of telephone poles and six inch timbers.

Plane Plunge Alarm Blamed on Ducks

HOVE, England, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—The quacking of ducks in flight was blamed today for an alarm that sent a lifeboat crew battling high waves in search of a plane reported to have plunged flaming into the sea last night.

Coast guardsmen, weary after a fruitless search, believed a large flock of ducks must have been mistaken for "a human birdman."

Etna Suspect Held In Numbers Raid

or indirectly through loans or bond issues to any of these concerns?"

He replied:

"No."

"Are either of these concerns indebted to Mellon interests directly, or indirectly, through the purchase of aviation equipment or supplies?"

"No."

It was also pointed out that Pennsylvania Airlines, founded in Pittsburgh and operating daily passenger, mail and express service between Cleveland and Washington, was not even using Gulf gasoline, a product of a Mellon company.

CIVIC PRIDE

R. K. Mellon explained his interest in aviation as civic pride. He said:

"When Pittsburgh Aviation Industries was formed, I thought it a good plan to get behind the civic movement. It was discussed by a group of civic-minded business men that Pittsburgh was falling behind in this new industry.

"Between my father and W. L. Mellon, and myself, we purchased and still hold 2,400 shares of P. A. I. C. stock. This represents only .051 of the total shares of the corporation."

Probers Order Lindbergh Income Tax Check-up

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—An income tax study touching Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and a host of other past and present names in the air mail field today was revealed as going forward under direction of a Senate committee.

Members of the Senate air mail investigating committee, who already have caused one sensation in the capital this week, disclosed they had ordered income tax check-ups also on Walter F. Brown, former Postmaster General, others in his administration, and Herbert Hoover, Jr., son of the former President.

Investigators explained they had sent out about 200 questionnaires to men prominent in companies carrying air mail and those who took part in making contracts for this work during the last administration.

As the information requested came back to the committee, they said, the Treasury was asked to check the income tax reports of the men concerned. Senators have been studying this information in search of any contrary statements.

LOW BIDS FAIL IN TRUCK ORDER

The county has awarded contracts for purchase of 23 trucks at a total price of $27,351.

Twelve 2½-ton type trucks, with a specified weight of 14,000, were contracted for from the Diamond T. Company.

Eleven 1½-ton Reo trucks were contracted for from the McKinley-Gregg Company.

Neither of the successful bidders offered the lowest figure. Director of Supplies Ray Sprigle stating the lower offers did not meet specification. Sprigle admitted he had drawn specification for the lighter type to shut out all but Reos, in an effort to standardize the light fleet. The county owns more than 20 trucks of that make.

Talk of War by Japan or U. S. Is Ridiculous, Says R. W. Child; Sees Profit for Both in Peace

ness, and the profit from our co-operation with Japan in building up order and purchasing power on the Asian mainland and —an adequate Navy will be the real guarantees of peace.

YET SUCH is the touchiness of the subject that whispers go around in Washington about "our understanding with Russia which is an alliance of force."

The President could not make such a treaty or bind us without our consent, even if he wished. Of course he has not even tried to do so. That this whisper should arise because we follow all the powers and nations in recognizing Russia is as absurd as to say that because we have an ambassador in Rome we plan war on Egypt.

Today the greatest possible cause for war between Japan and America is what some jackass militarist in Japan may write or some jittery member of this Congress may say.

The best cause for peace is Roosevelt's innate sense of realism and his straight-forward courage.

Policeman Too Vigilant, Husband Wins Divorce

The story of an overly-attentive policeman was told yesterday by Nicholas Alexson, 383 Boquet street, whom Judge Ralph H. Smith granted a divorce from Dorothy Ann Alexson.

Alexson testified the officer sent his wife flowers and plants. One day, Alexson continued, he appeared at home unexpectedly, and—

"My wife was in the kitchen with the policeman. She was washing her face and he was standing close to her. He had his coat and hat off."

Alexson said he followed his wife to Schenley Park one night and saw the other man about a block away. His wife, he asserted, told him:

"Watch yourself. You are going to have your head blown off if you spy on me."

On another occasion, Alexson said, he came home one night and found his wife absent and his young daughter smoking a cigaret. The mother, he said, was found in an automobile with the policeman near the Pittsburgh Country Club.

DR. WYNEKOOP'S DEFENSE SEEKS TO BAR CONFESSION

TRIAL TO HINGE ON COURT RULE ON APPEAL

Aged Woman in Cell Talks of 'Another Bar of Justice'

By DOROTHY DUCAS,
International News Service.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—The most important step in the whole trial of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop for the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta, on an operating table in her doctor's office last November, will be taken within the first half hour of the opening session Monday, it was revealed today.

Defense attorneys announced they would ask suppression in the trial of the confession the 62-year-old physician made to police and then repudiated.

If Judge Joseph B. David grants the motion, the props will have been knocked from under the state's case.

DENIES USE OF FORCE

If he denies it, the defense will have a lengthy, arduous task to prove the document was obtained under duress and that its specific information was false.

In that confession, cautiously worded at the end of three days of questioning by police, Dr. Wynekoop told how the wife of her favorite son, Earle, had died from an overdose of chloroform during a physical examination, and how her mother-in-law fired a shot into her back "to ease the situation."

When she repudiated the confession, the doctor said it had not been obtained by force, but had been signed because she "thought it proper."

The woman, who thinks her span of life is short, said:

"I would have stood by it, too, if I had not felt another bar of justice must be faced, going through no criminal court at all."

STUDIES CASE HERSELF

The mystery of that confession and its repudiation is the tightest knot in the baffling murder drama to be enacted here next week.

Attorneys for both sides know that everything rests on the court's acceptance of it.

That is why W. W. Smith, chief defense counsel, is ready to fling down the gauntlet at the outset, before Prosecutor Charles S. Dougherty is permitted to mention the document in his opening.

Sitting up in bed the accused woman goes over the case in her mind. She has the searching, logical mind of a doctor, that must probe every detail, even as do her attorneys.

SEVEN MAJOR POINTS

She knows, as they do, that there are seven major points the defense must explain by their secret "surprise defense."

First, the $10,000 life insurance policy on Rheta, in her mother-in-law's favor, for which the mother-in-law paid the first premium.

Second, Earle's unhappiness with his wife, which he has admitted and demonstrated in his relations with other women.

Third, the presence of Rheta's body in her mother-in-law's office, lying on the worn operating table where Dr. Wynekoop always examined her patients, and no one else in the house.

Fourth, the meeting between Dr. Wynekoop and Earle the day before the tragedy, when he had come back from Kansas City for a talk with his mother and did not want to come to the house to talk to her.

Fifth, the delay in notifying the police of the crime.

Sixth, Dr. Wynekoop's lack of emotion when the tragedy was revealed. (She said: "Some things are too deep for tears.")

Seventh, that confession and its repudiation.

HAWAII FLIGHT HELD 'ROUTINE'

International News Service.

HONOLULU, T. H., Jan. 13.—The U. S. Navy's latest aviation heroes who spanned the ocean gap between San Francisco and Hawaii in a mass flight of six seaplanes returned to "regular" work today.

Although reports continued today that the squadron flight was but a leg of a mass flight around the world, with Midway, tiny island outpost of the United States the next stop, Navy officials insisted the flight from San Francisco was merely a "routine transfer."

Lieut. Commander Knefler McGinnis, commander of the mass flight squadron, reported he was "on the job" at Pearl Harbor navy base.

McGinnis was not surprised when Commander Tod of the air station here told him the motors of the six flying boats were in perfect condition after the 2,150-mile flight of 24 hours and 35 minutes.

Among those on the bench were Judge M. A. Musmanno, whose election to Common Pleas Court caused the vacancy in County Court, and Judge Ralph H. Smith, instrumental in having Judge Richardson named by Gov. Pinchot.

Death Takes Former French Foreign Chief

PARIS, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Justin de Selves, 85, pre-war foreign minister of France, died last night.

CHARGE POLICE ABUSE, 3 FREED

A Criminal Court jury, after deliberating five hours, freed Mrs. Annie Vanjuria, 72, of Robinson Township, of a charge of feloniously setting fire to her little $800 house, after she had testified her alleged confession at the time of the fire was wrung from her by threats and blows from officers.

Theodore Bush, 22, and Paul Krisko, 19, also were acquitted. They have been in jail since November 22, but Mrs. Vanjuria had been released on her own recognizance.

Police testified before Judge George V. Moore that the three confessed, but all the defendants on the witness stand asserted the confessions were forced by beatings.

Following collapse of arson charges before Visiting Judge J. Frank Graff, testimony was completed late yesterday in the felonious assault and battery case against R. C. Henkel, 5317 Kincaid street, who, with his father, John Henkel, was charged with having beaten George Wilson, 74, chief witness in the arson case. The trial will be concluded Monday.

CAR KILLS MAN, SEEK OWNER

The owner of an automobile who, police said, abandoned the car after it struck and killed a man and then crashed against an iron pole at Fifth avenue and Dinwiddie street last night, was sought by police today.

The machine, speeding in Fifth avenue, struck John Spoerlein, 50, of 149 Margaret street, Mt. Oliver, and then hit the pole, police said. Spoerlein, a truck driver, was taken to Mercy Hosital and pronounced dead of a fractured skull.

Police learned the identity of the owner through the license number and began a search for him. An hour after the accident a man who said he was the owner called Sergt. Joseph Kohnke at Center Avenue Police Station and announced he would surrender and post bond. Meanwhile, police went to his home in Gable street, South Side, but did not find him there.

RECORD BRIDGE SCORE MADE

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Four New York teams—all experts—were all that were left today of the 17 foursomes that set out bravely three days ago to capture the team-of-four championship of the United States Bridge Association's "Grand National" tournament.

Two of the winners piled up last night what veteran tournament officials said were the largest totals they ever witnessed in a team-of-four match at only 64 boards—the number played in the quarter-final session.

Mrs. Ely Culbertson and her teammates, Waldemar von Zedtwitz, Edward Hymes and Louis Watson, scored the colossal total of 10,950 over M. H. Besser, A. E. Frankenstein, Ralph Kempner and H. W. Sax, of Chicago.

They had only 1,250 at the dinner recess, but scored 9,700 points in the night.

The team of David Burnstine, Michael Gottlieb, Oswald Jacoby and Howard Schenken did almost as well, winning by 10,570. This total, however, was about evenly divided between the two sessions.

Ely Culbertson's team trounced the Anniston (Ala.) quartet by 7,950.

The Burnstine-Gottlieb team meets Mrs. Culbertson's four today, while Ely Culbertson's quartet comes up against the Malowan-Rusinow team. The winners of the semi-finals will fight it out at 100 boards Monday and Tuesday.

Horse Killed, Man Injured in Collision

A horse owned by Meadow Gold Dairies, Inc., was injured so badly it had to be shot, early today, in a collision between a milk wagon and an automobile at Shady avenue and Fair Oaks street. Charles E. Straub, 27, of Brackenridge, driver of the automobile, was arrested on a reckless driving charge.

A. W. Simpson, 29, of 5940 Alder street, a passenger in the car, was treated at Pittsburgh Hospital for eye and ear injuries, police reported.

Republican Widow Retained as Va. Postmistress

FALLS MILLS, Va., Jan. 13.—(INS.)—Chivalry today triumphed over politics when Mrs. Allie Shepherd, Republican postmistress for 22 years, was notified she would be retained in office.

R. C. Harrison, farmer, and Oscar Wagner, merchant, were approved successively by the County Democratic Committee for the office, but both declined the appointment on the ground that "it's not right to oust a deserving widow."

'KIDNAP' FIGURE FACES COURT

Charged with harboring a minor, according to police, James, alias "Jack" Powers today faced a hearing in Morals Court in connection with the disappearance of Frances Weibley, 16, Schenley High School student, from her home at 707 Cherokee street, Herron Hill.

Missing for five days, the girl had first reported she was kidnaped and taken to Turtle Creek, but later retracted her story.

ALL NOT TOLD, FAY SAYS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Fay Webb Vallee, through an attorney, denies she held romantic conversations with Gary Leon, stage dancer, while her husband, Rudy Vallee, singer and orchestra leader, was absent from their New York apartment.

Her lawyer, Ben C. Cohen, said:

"Mrs. Vallee is not guilty of infidelity with Gary Leon or anyone else. The charges against my client are based on documents recording tapped telephone conversations. Vital portions of these have been deliberately omitted. If the full text of these conversations were revealed there would be absolutely no basis for these untrue accusations. At the proper time Mrs. Vallee will prove the untruthfulness of these charges."

INNOCENT, FAY'S FRIEND SAYS

International News Service.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Ja. 13.—"There never has been any misconduct between Mrs. Vallee and myself."

Garfield Leon, known on the stage as Gary Leon, made that assertion today following publication of Rudy Vallee's answer to Mrs. Vallee's injunction suit in New York that revealed asserted intimate details of a friendship between Fay and Leon.

Located with his bride of a month in their "honeymoon home" a short distance from the home of Fay's parents, Police Chief and Mrs. C. E. Webb, Leon declared:

"I am innocent of all charges involving Mrs. Vallee and myself.

"Anyone who makes the statement there has been misconduct between us is guilty of a deliberate falsehood."

citement and tongue-clacking through the theatrical sector.

FAY, RUDY AND GARY

Not the least dramatic portion of Vallee's affidavit, ordered sealed when it was first filed, was the crooner's sworn declaration that the "California Sunshine Girl" telephoned him during a nation-wide radio broadcast to tell him she "loved him about 50,000 million, million, billion trillion" times, but a few moments later telephoned Leon and carried on an intimate conversation with the dancer.

The telephone conversations, which Vallee claimed were frequent and sizzling, were recorded by a "simple telephonic device" attached to an extension 'phone in the swank Central Park apartment, Vallee's affidavit said, and a phonograph recorded them for Vallee—and possibly a divorce jury.

Fay told him she loved him, the affidavit set forth, but the "simple telephonic device" told him this conversation was carried on between Fay and Leon on March 22, 1933:

Fay—"I just got out of the shower. In fact, I am sitting here without any clothes on."

Leon—"That must be a lovely sight."

Fay—"But I have mules on."

Leon—"That doesn't do me any good."

Fay—"I just bought them. They are very pretty. Haven't you any friends or anything who live in a place a little way out of town?"

Leon—"Yes, we can go away up on One Hundred and Eighty-ninth street."

Fay—"Maybe we can go there tomorrow."

'HELLO DARLING'

On March 23, 1933, the affidavit stated, the following conversation was recorded between plaintiff and Leon:

Leon—"Hello there you."

Fay—'Hello darling."

Leon—"Listen, do you recognize this?"

Fay (pause)—"Yes, I do, no more, no less. That sounds like Mr. Vallee's program."

Leon—"It is."

Fay—"Listen, what are you doing tonight?"

Leon—"Well, right now, I'm in pajamas and rehearsing like mad."

Fay—"Will you be through at 10 o'clock?"

Leon—"Yes, why?

Fay—"Rudy is leaving at 10 o'clock to go to Philadelphia, and I told him I would come to the station."

Leon—"All right."

Fay—"Listen, we have to be awfully careful, Garfield. I mean there are a lot of spies around watching us. But my chauffeur is my chauffeur, see? So would you get in a taxi and meet me in the park some place and we can ride around in the park?"

Leon—"Oh! That sounds kind of mysterious."

Fay—"I mean we can do anything we want to in the car. I mean my chauffeur would never say a word."

RIVAL FEAR THREAT

The following is part of the same conversation, the affidavit claimed:

Leon—"I have a cold. I think I picked it up yesterday."

Fay—"It wasn't a girl who gave it to you? If I thought you fooled around with a girl I would kill her."

Vallee in his affidavit also claimed that Fay took advantage of his generosity in the matter of clothes, allowances, etc., to "stock up" at his expense for a flight with Leon "on board a tramp steamer." Concerning this, the affidavit set forth the following conversation:

Fay—"If you wanted me very badly, why didn't you ask? I'd go on a tramp steamer or something and love it."

Leon—"That is probably what we would have to do."

Fay—"You know what I would love to do? Let me tell you what I would love to do. Oh, forget your money, will you? Listen, I've got some money. He sends me orchids every night. Isn't that funny? Yesterday I bought five dresses and three pairs of shoes and three hats. I'm stocking up!"

Leon—"You better. You're no fool!"

Vallee asserted the claims made by his wife in seeking the injunction, that he had deceived her as to his income, negotiated a property settlement that was unfavorable to her and planned to divorce her without her knowledge were "utterly without merit and conceived in unworthy motives." He said:

"Whatever is unpleasant about this lawsuit, plaintiff has deliberately invited. Up until the present moment she has been more than fairly treated."

2 QUESTIONED IN SLAYING

Two men were questioned in the slaying of State Highway Patrolman Herbert P. Brantlinger near Bridgeville last September, although technically they are charged with stealing license plates.

Frank Cerino, of Bridgeville, was released under $500 bond, and Charles Eisenberg, also of Bridgeville, facing an additional charge of operating a motor vehicle during a period of suspension of his driving license, was remanded to the Allegheny County Jail.

Both men were arrested by Corporal J. V Hoover, still assigned to the search for Brantlinger's slayers.

Corporal Hoover said:

"We have questioned both men, but so far have succeeded in getting nothing out of them which would connect them with the slaying."

Woman Suicide Writes Of Dying Sensations

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Mrs. Margaret Grossman, 34, turned on the gas in her furnished room yesterday and then sipped champagne and whisky while she wrote her impressions of suicide.

The note, found beside her body, said it was her third attempt to kill herself. Eight months ago she and her husband, Edgar, took poison. He died. She recovered. Last week she tried to jump from a hotel window, but a friend pulled her back. Her notes read:

"My clock says 1:50 a. m. I turned on the gas five minutes ago. So far I feel only a tremendous pounding of my heart, which undoubtedly is due to fear of being revived once more.

"Morton, tell (name illegible) to pay more attention to the work of his Ph. D. charges than to tennis and handball. McGregor told me that he wished he had taken Edgar out for a glass of beer to change his mind. Well, tell him I had half a bottle of wine, half a bottle of champagne, and now I am having a good bond whisky, but still I want to follow Edgar.

"How awful it seems to have to wait for unconsciousness . . . Fifteen minutes have passed and I feel still quite capable of walking about. Twenty-five minutes.

"Thirty-five minutes. Am singing to Beethoven's (illegible) of all things.

"Fifty minutes, must have seven lives. 'Oh, hell'"—

DRY ORGANIZATIONS URGED TO UNITE OR QUIT FIGHT

INDIVIDUALISM BLAMED FOR DOWNFALL

By CAMERON RALSTON

Chairman Pennsylvania Committee Causes and Cure of Crime.

Dry organizations should either unite or quit. I say this in response to the call to dry organizations to form a new organization January 17 at Harrisburg.

Rugged individualism and a mania for doing and saying wrong things at the right time were the major causes of their downfall—said downfall distinctly a quantity in itself not related to repeal. Legislation will control (figure of speech) the return of liquor but what will control dry organizations in the future?

The National Conference of Organizations Supporting the (late) Eighteenth Amendment adjourned their annual meeting January 5, at Washington, D. C., and were just as far ahead then as when they adjourned their first meeting several years ago. While this body represents the most sensible step towards unity of "dry" forces, yet it gets absolutely nowhere. Why? Because of the aforementioned rugged individualism.

Dominated by a few individuals who possess more wind power than the rest, they pursued a course that included everything legislative from soup to nuts. Out of this organization was developed a board of strategy that might well be called a board of tragedy; their's was the most pitiful gesture of strategy ever seen in national affairs—particularly during the late political conventions in Chicago; more rugged individualism.

At present, and for several years, excepting the Women's Christian Temperance Union, dry organizations have been nothing but a name, granted on their letterheads you will find names of many important citizens, the majority of whom have forgotten they were ever on there and have not attended an organization meeting, national or otherwise, for many years.

The time has come to take stock and face the issue of temperance squarely. There are 42 separate temperance organizations supporting the (late) Eighteenth Amendment, and the Protestant church represents less than 25 per cent of the nation's populaton.

I suggest the fusion of all temperance units into one united organization, the American Temperance Society, working by states and counties, creating the one thing that will depreciate the consumption of beverage alcohol to its ultimate elimination—public sentiment. Would it be supported? Ask any layman who has given considerable time to "dry" work if he won't get behind it. Ask any minister or his church's official body. There is no limit to what it could do. I think even the metropolitan newspapers would be with it.

Yes, it would be supported and do as much as the Temperance Society now functioning along these lines in the British Empire, steadily gaining their objective.... but it will not be, the "drys" will see to that. Good old rugged individualism.

South Hills Choral To Give Program

Tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, the South Hills Choral will present a musical program in the Dormont Methodist Episcopal church under the direction of David Bisset. The Rev. Dr. J. D. Piper, pastor, will speak on "The Ministry of Music."

The Story of David -:- CHAPTER XI -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

After fleeing the wrath of Saul, who sought to slay him, David became captain over four hundred men; and Saul's servant, Doeg, told Saul that the priest, Ahimelech, had given David the sword of Goliath.

Then Saul sent for Alimelech and all his house, and when they came he accused Alimelech of conspiring against him. Saul commanded Doeg to fall upon the priests, and Doeg slew on that day fourscore and five.

Thus Saul destroyed Alimelech, the son of Ahitub, and all his house, and all the priests from Nob who had come with him to the king, except one of Alimelech's sons, named Abiathar. But he was not content with this, and at his command his servant, Doeg, the Edomite, fell upon Nob, the city of the priests, and smote it with his sword. Men, women, children and sucklings, oxen, asses and sheep he slew with the sword.

CANDY PARTY SUGGESTED FOR LIVELY EVENING

Prudence Penny Gives Recipes For Confection

Have you a lively crowd of young folks in the house who like lots of company and who keep you at your wits' end for entertaining ideas? If you do, have them throw a candy party, Prudence Penny suggests.

When Bill and Jane and Bobby arrive, hand each a clean white apron and a list of instructions for the evening. One can crack nuts, another clean them. Then there are pans to be buttered, ingredients to be measured, beating to do. A little thought beforehand and you'll have the youngsters hilariously busy all evening. Won't be any need to worry about wall flowers, either.

There are any number of candies you can make cheaply and simply. For a starter, in today's list you'll find the $5 prize winner, caramels. One look at your file or scrap book and you'll find any number of candy recipes with which Prudence Penny and her prize column have supplied you.

Nor need a candy party be only for the children. Grown-ups will find it grand fun, too, and it certainly is an effective ice-breaker. Try it!

Whatever your recipes or suggestions, send them in to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Daily prizes total $15: One $5 prize, 10 $1 prizes. No recipes sent in will be returned.

Dredge fish with salt, pepper and flour and lay in pan. Place two thin slices of salt pork on top and add one cup boiling water. Bake in quick oven (425 degrees F.) 15 minutes. Then add flour, stirring constantly. When smooth, add diluted milk gradually. Cook until thickened, then add salt, paprika and mushroom slices. Pour this sauce over cauliflower and sprinkle top with bread crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 10 minutes or until crumbs are brown.

Grease a shallow casserole (or any baking dish) from two to three inches deep), invert a saucer of small cup in center and fill dish with apple mixture. Cover with rich pastry, rolled one-fourth inch thick. Press down edges firmly and cut slits in center to allow steam to escape. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for 20 minutes, then reduce to 400 degrees F. and cook about 30 minutes longer, or until apples are thoroughly done. Maude Adams Directs Own Programs

By AIRCASTER

Apart from the importance of the star as a personage, the radio debut of Maude Adams last night was fraught with significance. The premier of her series may properly be regarded as a double experiment.

Primarily, she is to bring drama in a slightly new form, as well as with probably the first authentic interpretation, okayed by the playwright, and she is to bring it in halves, since half an hour is too brief a spell in which to encompass a full length version of "The Little Minister," her starter.

And secondly, Miss Adams, who has been given carte blanche by her commercial patrons (a novelty indeed) is the first celebrity, I believe, in history, excepting "Amos 'n' Andy," to put her foot down firmly against studio audiences.

NO AUDIENCE

It is her belief that anyone in the studio, not demanded by the physical requirements of broadcasting, serves to tear down the illusion so vital to dramatics via the microphone.

She became convinced of this during the days and nights in which she haunted the studios, prior to her acceptance of her contract, under an assumed name.

Added logic is given the technique which Miss Adams has prescribed by the fact that she is somewhat celebrated for her understanding of all the technical difficulties of broadcasting, particularly those applying to fanciful mind-pictures, peculiar to theatrics.

Her facility in this line may do a lot for radio, but if so, nobody is going to watch her tricks.

ILLUSION

Her studio is to be guarded not only during the broadcasts, but at rehearsals, not even the officials who usually roam around the corridors, being permitted inside.

Miss Adams feels, if her friends quote her accurately, that radio's matchless opportunities for creating illusions never have been adequately utilized.

Her maxim, with regard to the kilocycles is "radio should be heard and not seen."

Miss Adams will depart from custom also, by reciting her lines from memory. She has disdained script, and I understand that the Barrie plays, which she brings, all have been adapted for the air, personally by the actress.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Anyone could be a bridge expert when it comes to giving advice about the hands they deal up at Duquesne, the city, not the school.

Mrs. J. George Gruen was the dealer. When she picked up her cards she hastily covered her mouth to stifle an excited gasp. She held 13 clubs. A subdued commotion to her left and right and from across the table indicated surprising hands all around. Mrs. Gruen had dealt four perfect hands.

What was the eventual bid? No bid. All were so excited that they could do no more than expose their cards in astonishment.

Miss C. Shields, Mingo street—Scrip money may or may not be worth anything. It all depends on its date, character of issuance, and the conditions of redemption noted on the bill itself. Some unique type may have a collector's value. For the most part it is valueless.

John Fry, Irwin, Pa., notices things. He looked at a baseball player's picture on the sporting page and the light reflected through the paper and it gave the player the appearance of having two heads. The other head belonging to a figure in Ripley's cartoon on the reverse side. So John sends in his own "Believe It or Not—a man with two heads.

PLEASANT RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Shoulders droop under weight of years. Young, yet beauty has fled. Cheeks are sallow and drawn. Unsightly pimples. Keep your system clean and you keep the beauty of youth. Its energy. Its irresistible charm. Then life is not a failure.

Clogged bowels and inactive liver cause poisons to seep through the system. Health vanished and with it beauty and energy. Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets will help save you from this dark hour. For 20 years they have been prescribed in place of calomel to men and women seeking health and freedom from constipation. They act easily and smoothly. No dangerous griping. Take nightly before retiring. Results will amaze you.

Thousands of men and women would never be without Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, a vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color. 15c, 30c and 60c. All druggists.

DON'T NEGLECT COLDS

RUB soothing, warming Musterole well into your chest and throat—almost instantly you feel easier. Repeat the Musterole-rub once an hour for five hours. What gratifying relief!

Musterole is NOT just a salve. It's a "counter-irritant" containing good old-fashioned cold remedies—oil of mustard, menthol, camphor and other valuable ingredients.

That's why it gets such fine results—ease in 5 minutes, and relief in 5 hours, as a rule. It penetrates, stimulates, warms and soothes the congested parts, drawing out the pain and infection. Used by millions for 25 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In three strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong.

FOR YOUR MONEY!

GET A STRAIGHT 8 because

1 You can get a big, roomy Pontiac Straight Eight at a price that is very little more than that of the very cheapest cars. The smart, new Fisher bodies are finer and more spacious. The improved Straight Eight engine gives you greater power and speed—full 84 h. p. and a top speed of 82 actual miles an hour!

2 Here is a car that gives you the inherent smoothness, flexibility and luxury of Straight Eight transportation at a price that compares favorably with the prices of many cars with less to offer in cylinders, performance and size. The new Pontiac, remember, is definitely in the low-price field!

3 Last year's famous Pontiac was known as the Economy Straight Eight because its fuel costs were well in line with those of sixes. Today's Pontiac, thanks to further refinements in its Straight Eight engine, gives you more miles to the gallon by a generous 10 per cent. Remarkable economy!

4 The trend today is toward Straight Eights. The Pontiac Straight Eight for 1934 will depreciate more slowly, and all evidence indicates a higher resale value "at the end of the road," just because it is a Straight Eight. Another good reason why this great, new Pontiac is such a wise investment!

5 If your present car will make the down payment on a car of cheaper make, it will probably make the down payment on a big, new Pontiac. Your monthly payments, in any case, will be but a few dollars more. Why wait? See and drive the big, new Pontiac. Get a Straight Eight for your money!

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

A Pittsburgh girl who's wintering in the South is planning an early March wedding, which will not take place here nor in the South, but in New York.

She's pretty Mary Louise Mitchell, daughter of Mrs. Lou Mitchell, of Marlboro street. Her betrothal to Richard Miles Dewhurst, Jr., son of Mrs. Margaret Hay Dewhurst, of South Aiken avenue, was made known a month or so ago.

I've just had a note from Mrs. Mitchell—she's at the Monterey Apartments in Miami Beach, Fla.—telling me that the wedding will take place March 7 in New York in the Little Church Around the Corner.

Junior Patrol

Today, fellows, is the 108th anniversary of the death of Stephen Collins Foster, the man who composed so many beautiful songs.

He was a Pittsburgh man, but many of his songs were written about the South and the West. We all know "Old Black Joe" and "Old Folks at Home." They are called folk songs because they are the native songs of a people. If you don't know some of Foster's songs, fellows, learn to sing them.

Now here is a letter from John Colbert, of 407 North Second street, Jeannette, Pa. He writes:

"I have drawn a cartoon which I think will keep children off of streets that are not roped off when sled riding this winter. The cartoon is inclosed and I would like it very much if you would print it in the Mail Box."

We are going to try to do that, John. It is a good drawing, and we think it will do a lot of good. Thank you.

This is a letter from Adolf Luczak, of 22 Mackey street, Pittsburgh. He writes:

"I am sending you five members to start a club in our neighborhood. I wish I could get my membership cards as quickly as I can. We have meetings every week. I read the Junior Patrol Mail Box and I think it is very beautiful to have it in the paper."

All right, Adolf, and thank you for writing. When you have 10 members we will send you a captain's armband if you have been elected captain.

Thomas Campbell, of Finleyville, R. D. No. 1, writes that he has lost his pin and card, but he promises to take care of the new one we will send him.

Jewish Council Class To Hear Miss Beatty

Miss C. Evelyn Beatty, principal of Frick Elementary School, will address the child study class of Pittsburgh Section, National Council of Jewish Women, on "Emotional Problems of Children" at the meeting to be held Tuesday in the Y. M. & W. H. A.

An open forum during which individual problems may be presented to Miss Beatty, will supplement the talk.

The next meeting of the Garden Club of Pittsburgh Section is to be held at the home of the chairman, Mrs. A. Cass Sunstein, Bennington avenue, on Wednesday at 2 o'clock. Stanley W. Leonard, leader of the club, will discuss designs for private gardens and also arrangements of city grounds.

The section's home economics class will meet Monday, January 22 in Utility Hall, and Miss Karen Fladoes will discuss yeast doughs, fancy doughs and cinnamon buns. The foods demonstrated later will be distributed among the women in attendance.

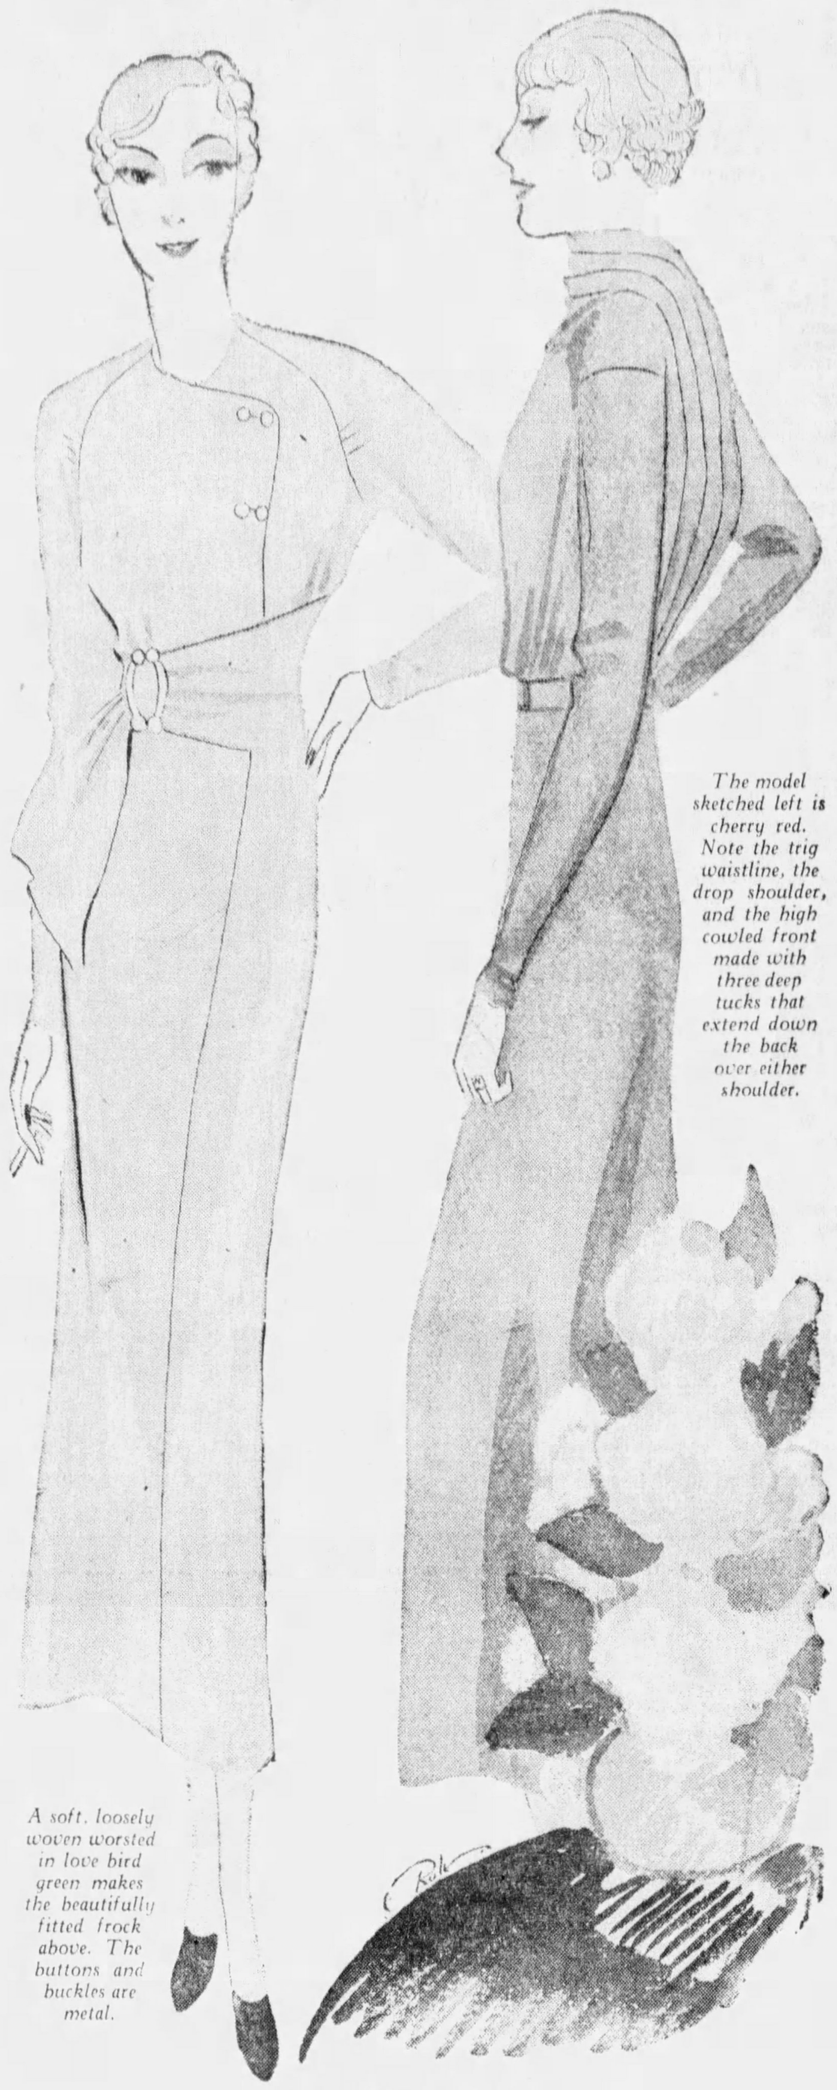
Eastern Star Association To Elect New Directors

The Eastern Star Temple Association of Western Pennsylvania will have the annual meeting of its stockholders and election of five directors next Saturday afternoon in the Hotel Henry. The objective of the Temple Association is to build an Eastern Star Temple in Pittsburgh, a project which was started 12 years ago.

Approximately 100 chapters, comprising a membership of about 40,000 women, have combined their efforts towards this goal. Several hundred members of the order are individual stockholders.

Mrs. William T. Todd, of Shady avenue, has been president of the association since her administration as worthy grand matron of the state, when the building fund was started.

A DASH OF GIDDY COLOR



The model sketched left is cherry red. Note the trig waistline, the drop shoulder, and the high cowled front made with three deep tucks that extend down the back over either shoulder.

A soft, loosely woven worsted in love bird green makes the beautifully fitted frock above. The buttons and buckles are metal.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THERE IS ALMOST never a month of the year when one does not need a light woollen frock at some stage of the thermometer. Even in the far south they can pull a hailstone storm in August that suggests a jersey frock instantly, and up here there are lots of cool days.

So the light weight and light colored woollen frocks offered for sale right now will be excellent investments until they give up the ghost from wear and tear. At the moment it is with fur coats that we shall wear them. Every coat looks better when it has some bright shade to contrast with it, and it is a cheery notion, besides, to emerge from sleet and snow all cozy in a spring color or a vibrant, warm shade.

The favored colors just now are old gold; parrot, chartreuse and lettuce green; pencil and pery, tawny shade; cherry, Christmas and hunt-aqua-marine blue; Mexican clay, which is a coping red; and yellow mellon tones.

A Mother Should Not Boss Married Daughter

Who's to blame when we "can't live our own lives"? Ourselves? Or the people who horn in and run us?

Lillian thinks Mamma is the villain in her plot—but is she?

Or is there another answer?

Dear Elsie:

Will you please help me? I am so disgusted I don't know what to do. What I want to know is—

How much bossing and advice does a young married woman have to take from her mother?

When I was single I did everything that my mother told me to. I never disputed her judgment, or refused to mind her. I thought then that when I married I would be running my own home, but it seems I can't.

She still wants me to do as she says. Of course I know that she is older, and has had more experience, and we do mostly agree about all but one thing. But that one thing is very important. I want to know whether she is right or wrong in her arguments.

I love children, and I want some of my own, like other young couples have. I simply adore them, and I would be so happy with a baby! But my mother objects. She says that if I have any I will die.

Every time I talk about it she argues, but I think she has a very poor excuse for what she tells me. She always says that if she had her life to live over, she would certainly see that there were no babies to tie her down.

ADVICE UNWELCOME

I think she is a little bit selfish, myself, but still I sometimes think she is right when she says I might die. The "tying down" part doesn't worry me. I am different from her. I wouldn't mind that. I want children.

What shall I do? Shall I go on this way, and live an empty life? Why does she say things like that? Why can't she let me live as I want to, without telling me what to do? LILLIAN.

How much bossing does a young wife have to take from her mother?

She doesn't have to take any, sissy, if she has the gumption to stand up for her rights. If she does take it, it's her own spinelessness that is responsible. Mamma still tries to run your life because she gets a big bang out of Being Boss—and because you let her. You've never actually grown up, or tried to stand on your own feet.

You have every right to make your own decisions. But people do not respect our "rights" unless we respect them ourselves, youngster. And if you make a worm of yourself, somebody's sure going to use you for fish-bait.

And while we're discussing rights, it doesn't seem to have occurred to you that your husband may have a few. You think mamma's being mean to you because she's arguing against a future family—but how are you treating him?

SHOULDN'T INTERFERE

How about his rights? How about the vows you made to "forsake all others and follow him" when you were married? If you don't like mamma bossing your home, what do you think he thinks about you for letting her do it?

Take a tip, little sister. He thinks plenty—and none of it is complimentary. So if you want to save your home, you'd better get busy and grow up, pronto! And that means sitting right down and telling Dear Mamma where to head in.

Yes, I know she loves you. You needn't be rough about it—but mothers sometimes must be taught to act regular as well as other folk. So tell her, kindly but firmly, that you're a woman now and have a life of your own to live—and that she mustn't interfere!

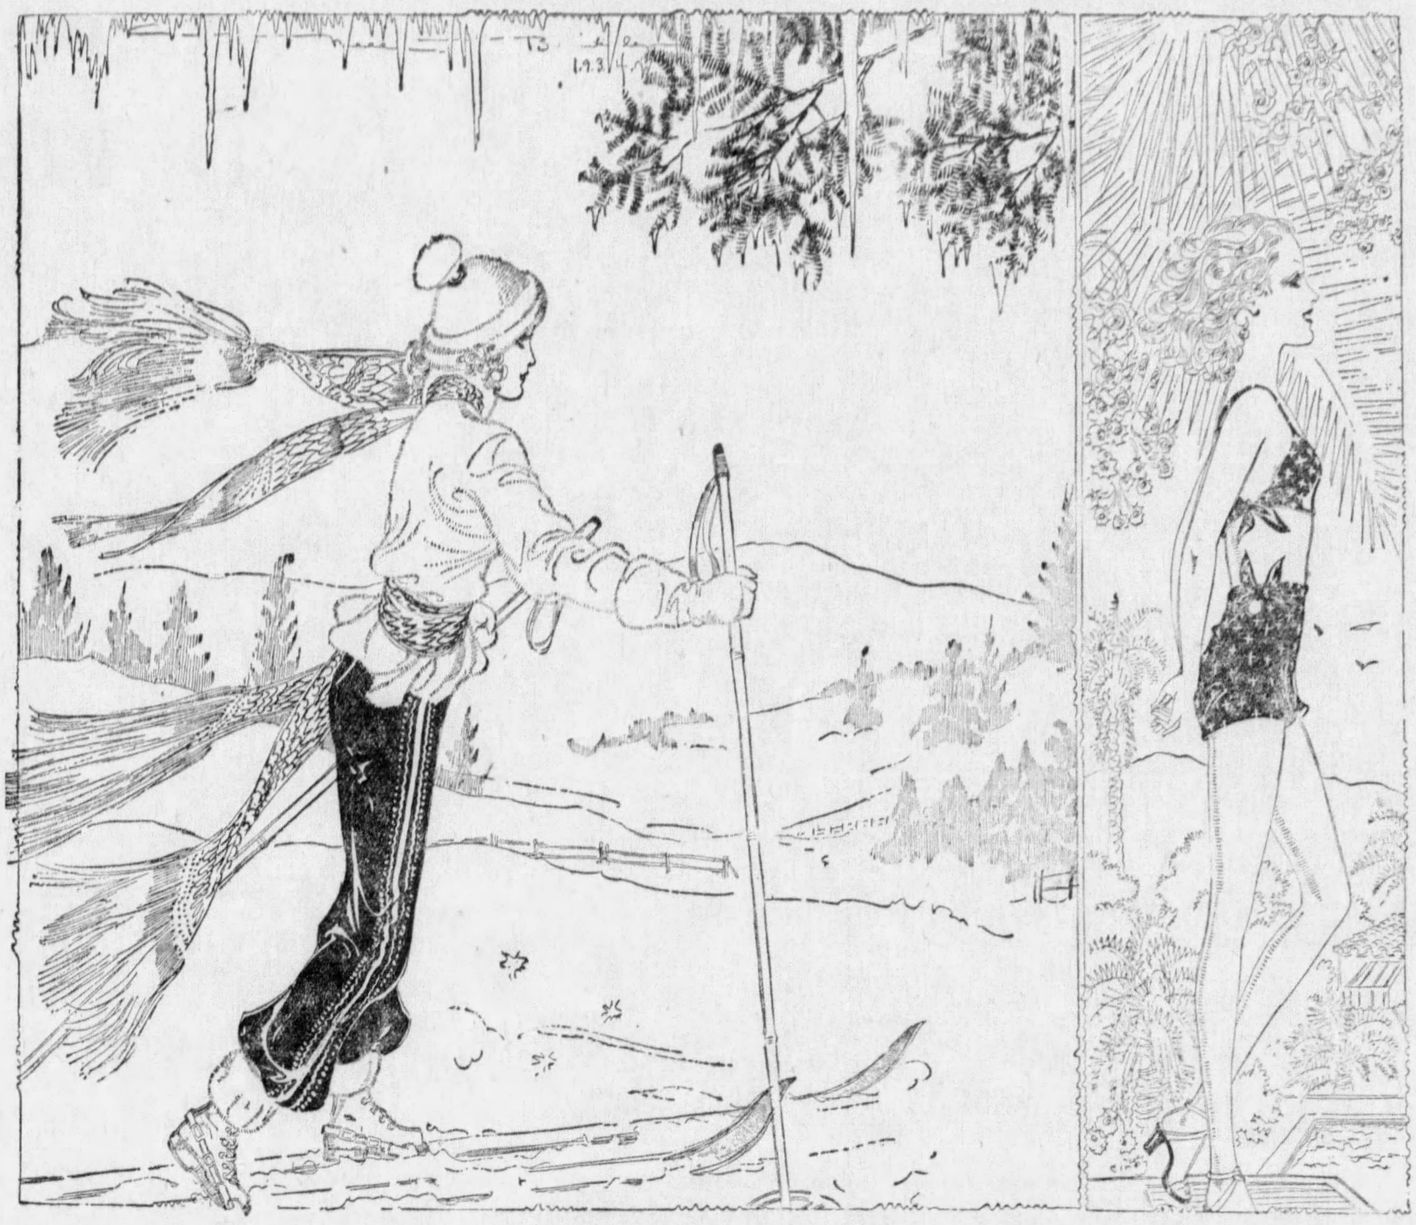
'HERE—AND THERE'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



Looking out over the sullen St. Lawrence recently, blotted with great moving floes of ice, watching the flag on a citadel standing out frozen stiff to the breeze, all of it whipped away in a bitter northeaster but a square next to the pole; plodding along on skiis, watching the bright jackets and tuques and sashes of the youngsters, and a few oldsters, around me; their cheeks as red as any red sash there, I thought, how funny: Jill here is having her good time at 20 below, and Jill THERE, in sunny California, is having hers at a balmy 68 or 70. HERE the wind carries the scent of millions of pine trees. There it wafts roses to the delicate nose. Here are wool and heavy boots, and mittens as thick as a half-inch board, and as impervious to the cold. There Jill is stripped to just this side of nudity, and she is thinking of going swimming. HERE Jill is done out like an Esquimau (Eskimo), and she is NOT thinking of going swimming. She is watching ice sparkle in the air like flung tinsel.

But rose or ice-tinsel, wool or bare skin, each is having her good time, just as what half the world thinks is fun is what the rest of it shivers at.

To have the good time is the thing. To always be young enough inside the heart to find it.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Remembering the Doctor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Some time ago, during the illness of my son, a doctor (stranger to me at the time but known by my husband) was very good to us, giving up his time and so forth.

We feel we would like to give him a small gift to show him how much we appreciated all he did for us. What would you suggest as being appropriate?

S.

A small clock, either a traveling clock or a desk clock, is often an appropriate gift in this case. A leather accessory for his desk is good, too; a portfolio, or a covered leather box for his letters. Or a heavy, masculine-looking "library set," the scissors and letter opener together. Or a photograph frame of a good-looking but conventional kind. A handsome cigaret box or a large white-glass ash-tray is a convenient present. A subscription to a magazine is often a very welcome present for a doctor, but, of course, this means that we must be sure that he hasn't already one for the magazine we contemplate sending. Books are always a good present. A fountain pen and pencil set is another suggestion.

Addressing the Widow

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My girl friend and I are having a dispute which has turned into a bet. I always read your column and you answered this question for me once before, but as I did not keep your answer, I did not have it for verification.

I wrote a letter to a dear friend of my mother's during her absence. I could not remember this friend's deceased husband's name, so I addressed the envelope to Alice Downs, Town, State. My girl friend says that this was wrong, that it should have been addressed to Mrs. Alice Downs.

You are a source of help to so many people and I am sure all of them would join me in thanking you. My heart longs to thank such people who are of such a service to humanity. S.

Thank you, with a very deep bow, for your beautiful tribute . . . it touched me very much, dear friend.

After you have been so friendly, it seems very ungracious of me to tell you that you were not in the way that you addressed this letter. But I'm sorry to say that you weren't. We must have a title before (or Esq., after) a name written on an envelope. This is most important, for omitting the title gives a curt and brusque appearance to our addressing of the envelope, and doesn't do honor to the person to whom we are writing.

It is always the formal name that we write on an envelope. And since a widow's formal name is exactly the same as it was before her husband's death, we should address an envelope to a widow: Mrs. Henry Downs.

Now since you could not remember this friend's deceased husband's name, it would have been better to use the form Mrs. Downs, rather than the form suggested by your friend, Mrs. Alice Downs.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Misusing the Double

It is a general rule, followed by almost all good Bridge players, not to double for a Takeout on a strong two-suited hand, the reason being that with this type of holding it is almost invariably more important to get across a message of distribution to the partner at the earliest possible moment, as the distribution of the suits quite likely will determine the outcome of the hand. An unwise Takeout Double, wasting, as it well may do, a round or two of bidding, is quite likely to result not to the Declarer's advantage, but to his detriment.

The hand below, which was played in a Rubber game at a bridge club in New York, is a case in point. The participants were Messrs. Walter Malowan and David Burnstine, sitting West and East, respectively, and Mrs. Marie Black and Mrs. Emory Clement, North and South.

East, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

Mrs. Marie Black

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Double (1)	2 ♡ (2)	3 ◇ (3)
Pass	6 ♠ (4)	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A mistaken call at this point. A bid of two hearts, Forcing to game, or a one-spade Overcall, would be more effective.

2—Mr. Malowan tries to prevent the opponents from getting together.

3—This response should have been anticipated by South, as it was highly improbable that North could have four spades or four clubs or, in fact, the strength necessary for a further response with two bidding opponents, vulnerable. However, North undoubtedly had a better bid at this point and that was a Double of two hearts, which would keep the bidding one step lower and might, if partner's hand was of the type with which the contract might be permitted to stand, result in a heavy penalty for East and West.

4—At this point, if South is to bid the Slam, six clubs is the correct bid because the suit is so much stronger and one card longer than the spades, and thus better prepared to stand the forces which are undoubtedly in prospect.

In the play at six spades South was defeated but a single trick. The interesting feature of the hand, however, is that South can make seven clubs with any Opening other than a trump, and six clubs against any defense whatever.

TODAY'S QUESTION

North-South vulnerable; East-West not vulnerable. The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	2 ♣	Pass	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

You, West, hold:

♠ 8 6 2 ♡ J 10 9 ◇ Q 4 ♣ A 10 8 6 4

What do you lead?

Answer—The spade 8. A careful review of the bidding indicates one outstanding hope of defeating the contract. Since you hold five clubs and you know your partner must hold five, from his Overcall, Declarer's stopper must consist of the King either singly or twice guarded. If you open either the Ace of clubs or away from the Ace, it is more than possible that you will give Declarer his ninth trick as he then will have a good chance, judging from the bidding, to run eight more tricks in diamonds and hearts. However, there is an excellent chance that your partner holds the Ace of spades. He must have a trick somewhere to justify his Overcall and from North's bidding it is highly improbable that this trick is in either the diamond or heart suit. If, after your short-suit Opening, your partner wins the first trick with the Ace, the club return will be indicated to him by a look at the Dummy, which will contain at the most a singleton club.

Madge Asks to See Copies of Poems

If there be anything more fatuous—and in some respects more beautiful—than the belief of any decent man in the essential truth of women he has known as friends, even though their falsity has been proved, I have yet to find it.

Noel Veritzen had cause to fear Avis Arlen's chicanery; he had listened with horrified protest to some of her falsehoods concerning himself which I had retailed to him; but he could not bring himself to believe that she had been cheaply faking when she had told him of her love for poetry.

It was no time for half measures, I told myself, as I "girded my loins for battle." The terrific confidence he had just given me—that he once had written poems to Avis Arlen—appalled me with the possibilities of sinister interference with his future marital happiness with Mary.

He had said, and I had no reason to disbelieve him, that he had written the "poems" as a jest and upon a bet. But I knew what Avis Arlen's interpretation of those poems would be.

I thought I knew more than that. I was as sure as if I had seen a blue print of her plan that she had maneuvered to get those "poems" written by Noel, in order that she might have some hold upon him, even though he had no suspicion of her plan.

"Let us sit down, Noel," I said quietly when I could control my speech. "Mary simply will have to wait until we get this thing properly threshed out. I need not tell you just what dynamite those things might prove, if Avis Arlen can manage to get them into Mary's hands, either before tomorrow or afterwards."

GIRL LIED

"Oh! Do you think she would stoop to do that?" he asked. "I know she has talked a lot, and foolishly, but to bring out verses that were written in jest and pretend they were real—that is so vile an act that I cannot believe she would be guilty of it."

"You are bolstering your hopes upon sand, Noel," I told him severely. "Let us get one thing straight. In my opinion—and I have studied the young woman very carefully—there is nothing which she would not do or risk—short of murder—I'll acquit her of that—in order to break up your wedding, or, failing that, to cause you unhappiness afterward, in the hope that finally you will turn to her.

"She lied to you about liking poetry, Noel," I went on, "and I am certain that she was equally untruthful when she inveigled you into writing those poems as a jest. Tell me, didn't she propose the bet?"

Noel nodded.

"Now that I think of it, she did," he said, and in his voice was the reluctance with which any man of fine instincts and breeding "tells" on a woman. "But I was to blame in writing 'em. I ought to have known better, although I thought at the time that I would bring copies of them home and show them to Mary. But—I never did."

"You were very wise," I told him. "After you and Mary have been married for a number of years, it may be safe for you to discover them accidentally some day, and get a good laugh out of them. But not now. Tell me, where are the copies you made."

"I'm not quite sure, but I think they're in one of my trunks over at The Larches, a trunk into which I'm putting things I shan't need for some time, and which Mr. Grantland has kindly promised to keep for me until I get back from our trip and can decide where I want to have it sent."

ASKS FOR COPIES

"After Mary is safely in bed, will you get them and bring them over here?" I queried.

His face was suddenly brick red again.

"I'll do whatever you say, of course," he answered, "but I surely do hate to have you see those things, they're so amateurish. I tried to make them clever, but I fell down terribly on the job."

"Let me be the judge of that," I told him, smiling. "It isn't their literary style that I want to see now, however. I'm anxious to see just how much of a case Avis Arlen could make out of them, if she decided to make trouble."

He started again, as if rowweled.

"What do you mean, 'make trouble'?" he asked. "Do you think she would dare——"

"She would dare anything," I told him, "but please leave the worrying to me. I'm going to make certain she does not get a chance to see either you or Mary, unless in the presence of a number of people. And your job, until you leave on your wedding trip tomorrow, is to be a good soldier and obey orders. I'll try not to be too much of a martinet."

WASHINGTON PAVEMENT PATTERN 457

This Lovely Quilt Easy to Make

Washington Pavement is one of those handsome quilt patterns that, though exceedingly simple to do, results in an ornate pattern. Like the Pineapple pattern, it is made of patches that, to a great extent, are all the some width, making it possible to cut the material into strips, and then cut the patches from these. The pattern lends itself either to two materials or to shaded effects in which case scraps of materials can be used effectively.

Pattern 457 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single or double bed size, and diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Household Hints

Dip fish in hot water before cleaning and the scales will come off easily.

White fox furs can be cleaned at home with powdered starch. Rub the starch in with a piece of clean flannel, taking care to stroke the way of the fur. Shake, and finally brush out the starch with a clean clothes brush. If possible, always keep the fur in a box or drawer lined with blue tissue paper to preserve its whiteness.

Pie shell should be baked in a very hot oven (450 degrees F.) until they feel firm and dry and until the edge of the crust is an even golden-brown. The temperature at which filled pies are baked depends on the filling, and will be given under the individual pie recipes. In general, however, such pies are placed in a hot oven for the first few minutes in order to start the baking of the crust before the filling has had time to soak into it; then during the rest of the period they are baked at a lower temperature suited to the filling.

How to Keep Well

The Menace of Disease 'Carriers'

Because of the apprehension and fear aroused by recent announcements of an epidemic of amebic dysentery, I deem it wise to tell you more about it. I am glad to say this epidemic is now under control. But the United States Public Health Service warns all health officers to guard against possible outbreaks of this dreaded disease.

Dr. Copeland

Most persons have the mistaken idea that amebic dysentery is exclusively a disease of the tropics. Though an uncommon disease in this climate, it is occasionally found in the southern part of the United States. Within the past decade a good many cases have been discovered in the North.

The disease is caused by a parasite called "endameba histolytica" associated with uncleanliness. This agent of harm is carried to the intestinal tract by infected food or drink.

The food becomes dangerous when contaminated by infected food handlers. As is true in the case of carriers of typhoid fever, persons may harbor the dysentery germs without knowing it. They spread the disease and of course are a menace to society.

Unfortunately, the victim of amebic infection may not know he has the disease until many weeks have elapsed. In fact, symptoms may not appear for a period of two to 12 or even 13 weeks. When the disease is recognized in its early stages, it can be cured. But the disorder is often overlooked and relief not sought until it is too late.

Severe abdominal pain, headache, fever, acute diarrhea and heavy discharges of mucus and blood from the bowel are the most conspicuous signs of this type of dysentery. It is often confused with other ailments and may be incorrectly diagnosed as colitis, intestinal obstruction, peritonitis or appendicitis.

An improperly treated case of amebic dysentery leads to the chronic form. Unless proper care is taken it imperils the health of other members of the family. Even though complete recovery may appear to have taken place, the victim, as I have said, may unknowingly harbor the parasites for years and in this way spread the affliction to unknown numbers of others.

Amebic dysentery should be suspected in every case of persistent and intermittent diarrhea. This suspicion may be well founded in communities where cases have been reported to the local health authorities.

No one can deny the importance of careful health examinations of all food handlers. In the recent epidemic the source of infection was traced to contaminated food handlers, employes in eating establishments. All applicants for food handling positions, as well as those food handlers already employed, should be subjected to frequent examinations. Strict hygiene and personal cleanliness must be enforced. When these measures are properly adhered to outbreaks of dysentery will no longer occur.

Answers to Health Queries

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When applying coloring substance, brush the wrong way of the fur; the mascara will not drip through onto the skin surface.

Brush upper teeth downward, lower teeth upward. Let the bristles slide between the biters, and over the grinding surfaces of all the molars. If the dentifrice gives out, place equal portions of salt and baking soda in a tin salt cellar and use that; it is tonic to the gums and the salt crystals give a thorough cleansing to the enamel.

Here is an interesting sidelight on beautifying. A woman informs us that she has made herself better looking by believing that she is beautiful. She says that when she was a child she always heard that she was homely, which depressed her, and made her self-conscious. As she grew up, she thought about the effects of being told that she was ugly, decided to do a turn about. It is her belief that illusions fulfill themselves, often come true. Whenever she looked in the glass she said: "You're sweet. You're pretty. You're getting prettier every day." This leads her toward making every possible effort to live up to her own dream of herself. Worth trying, yes? Or maybe you don't need to.

Thigh reduction is going on at a great rate; too ample ones are likely to put the shimmering evening frock completely to the bad. Here is an elegant exercise that will do the work; lie on the back on the floor, hands under hips for support. Lift one leg without bending the knee—keep the leg as rigid as you can—then send it directly away from the body and do a wide circle. There will be a hard muscle pull at first, some soreness and discomfort, which is proof that the exercise is just what you needed.

The Private Papers of a Reporter

A group of locals were babbling again about "getting away" from New York for a little while . . . One of them, recently on tour for two months, was saying how the other places were easier on the system . . . Away from New York, she was saying, she could walk and not be jolted out of her reveries by friends and others, who swap lies with you . . . "How about dinner Friday night?" they say, or "we're giving a party in your honor, you must come!" . . . In New York, it is too trying, was the argument . . . You must be pleasant to your friends, of course . . .Out of town, where you are not known, you go and do as you please—and as a result, the nerves function properly . . . This is true . . . In Miami Beach recently—the wicked gleam returned to my orbs, the lines of weariness were erased, meals were eaten regularly and promptly, and by 10 p. m. as a rule—the sandman knocked me cold . . . You could stroll in search of a movie featuring a picture you hadn't seen—you found a chili parlor which you didn't miss each night—and nobody knew you and what's more nobody cared . . . In New York, most of us are trying to catch up with a hearse, and yet when I am away from it longer than a fortnight (such fancy words, he means two weeks and why doesn't he say so!) I yen to be back at the grind . . . In sum—New York is a great place to go to—but a better place to get away from . . . And I don't mean a single word of it.

When one of the newly formed music halls folded suddenly the other day, without paying salaries, the Manufacturers Trust Co., bankers of the building, turned the place over to the employes and the cast of the show for one night — New Year's Eve . . . Out of the proceeds each person received the equivalent of two days' pay and a little more . . . The bank refused to touch a penny of it—for which a nod on behalf of those concerned . . . Channing Pollock, the playwright, thinks it is a good time to revive "The Fool," which he penned . . . He spoke on the subject before a meeting of 500 ministers of the Federation of Churches, all of whom were enthusiastic over the idea and pledged their support . . . Mr. Pollock, however, cannot get anyone to back it . . . The first Ambassador from Soviet Russia to the U. S. (Troyanovsky) was met at the boat by flocks of reporters . . . One of them engaged the Ambassador in long conversation . . . Troyanovsky did not know he was gabbing to a reporter from a White Russia newspaper. So the first interview with a Soviet official will appear in a paper which is opposed to him and the Soviet.

"Penelope," who gabs for an Australian rag, memos that Australia has been visited by many Yankee Doodlers, except this dep't . . . Penelope lists us as a wisecracker "of the most scandalous order" . . . Which shows you how rumor will get around . . . Add to your Appropriate Name Dep't: A Dayton, Ohio, newspaper reports that Judge Markey, of Dayton, has assigned Forrest Winchell to handle the divorce information desk . . . One of the neatest of the similes, and Frank Wilstach certainly would have listed it in his dictionary of them, was in a Hollywood Citizen-News drama column, to-wit: "She is a chorus girl as slim as the vainest of the personal pronouns."

Well, and didn't I have myself a time of it writing about my new short-wave radio toy? . . . As I read the proof on the column—it seemed to me it made interesting reading—because I had never before read anything like it . . . And no wonder! . . . It's against the law! . . . You must not write or even tell a newspaper what you hear on short-wave . . . Lucky for me, I suppose, that I didn't write about anything serious at the time, merely relating the thrill of hearing the plane pilots . . . And Bert Stoll, who is a pilot, and who sent along that grand story of the Canadian hero, Phil Sauve, wrote me that he and other pilots were amused a little . . . That they never say "take the ship through" . . . And I replied to Stoll, that perhaps they don't—but along with Ted Husing and Art Arthur, I heard them so say! . . . It was my sour luck, too, not to have been at the dials the night that flier was lost for over four hours in the fog . . . Instead, I sat at a night club table and tuned in on blabbers, who were dull . . . And it should be noted now that if you own a short wave set—don't put it in your car, but keep it at home—for the law fines you $1,000 unless you have a permit . . . It is okay in the home, however . . . The reason, of course is to prevent the illicit, who go in for crime, from knowing when they are traced.

A letter from Count de Mieres, of Barranquilla, Colombia, South America, tells me that he has taken the liberty of baptizing a little mosquito, "The Walter Winchell," because it bothers people all day long. . . . . I knew one day I would make it, by golly! . . . . I knew that the time would come when I would finally be so honored, and I don't know how to thank Count de Mieres, so touched am I . . . . But it took another country to do it, which just goes to show you how easy it is to jot down nearly eight lines . . . . I hear that the special counsel to the Comm. of Accts. (Mr. Cooper) has access to all the records of the city and that he will make the La Guardia Administration a continual Seabury investigation . . . . It will be directed, of course, at the few county offices that Tammany retained . . . . And the talk has it that Mr. Seabury has already given word that he is to be a minister without a portfolio in practically every important department in town—after the manner of Mussolini . . . . Some actors are incessantly in character. One of them, wounded over a form of criticism, pleasantly enough called, and offered his side of the matter . . . . There were no snarls or the usual bickerings. The critic said he enjoyed spiking an untruth, etc. . . . But it was a mistake . . . . The lad proceeded to tell intimates how he "demanded" a retraction, or else . . . . Nobody yet ever got one from this corner that way . . . . The incident, of course, makes it impossible to happen again.

The line recently on how to amuse the baby when it bawls (place a moth-ball in a glass of water and watch it go up and down) has confused many readers, who tried it and what do you think? It doesn't work! Because in writing the line I omitted the most important part of the trick...It must be carbonated water ...If still it doesn't work—try and get your money back.

Eddie Cantor Sees Rome In Penn

By MICHAEL SHAW

The producing genius of Samuel Goldwyn has brought forth another successful screen musical in "Roman Scandals," now in the Penn.

Eddie Cantor stars, Ruth Etting sings a song, George S. Kaufman and Robert E. Sherwood provide a fantastic plot and Harry Warren a few tunes, Busby Berkeley builds up some eye-filling spectacles, and Gloria Stuart heads a cast of film favorites, backed up by a chorus of what must surely be the prettiest girls in Hollywood.

Many of these are names to conjure with; but in the final analysis it is Mr. Goldwyn's picture — an opulent, extravagant, rather amazing picture. Its humor and its thrills are really overshadowed by its beauty. Mr. Goldwyn must have spent a fortune on it, and it is worth what it cost.

Cantor appears as a shiftless but golden-hearted grocer's boy in a typical American town called West Rome. Banished by the police after a series of run-ins with the leading citizen, he trudges wearily along a country road. This soon turns into an ancient Roman road, and Cantor finds himself in a toga.

Eddie has read a lot of history, and in his dream he meets the emperor, the empress, the captured British princess, the senators, and Josephus, the friend of the people—and they are all pretty much as he must have imagined them back in West Rome.

The plot here becomes rather complicated, but you can imagine what Cantor, now rechristened Oedipus, does with scenes where he is sold as a slave on the auction block; where he invades the ladies' bath in the palace; where he faces the imperial torturers, and where he becomes the food-taster for the emperor, knowing full well that the empress just can't wait to poison her spouse.

It all winds up with Eddie fleeing for his life in a chariot behind four madly racing steeds, with many, many other chariots in hot pursuit. A crash and Eddie wakes, unmasks West Rome's leading man as a crook and becomes the town's hero.

Cantor is in his element. His Boston-terrier eyes bulge in frequent terror, his wisecracks crackle, and he does several songs, particularly "Keep Young and Beautiful," in the best Cantor style.

Busby Berkeley, who did so much for "Forty-second Street" and its successors, here reaches stunning heights in his slave market and bath numbers. The settings throughout are nothing short of magnificent. The Roman scene gives the opportunity for continued vivid contrast of black and white, so effective in the films, and every advantage is taken of it. The chariot sequences are most spirited, with a judicial admixture of humor and breath-taking excitement.

If you like Cantor, you won't miss his fourth annual screen show. Even if you don't like him, there's enough fun and more than enough beauty to make "Roman Scandals" worth your while.

Little Groups Active in Drama

By GEORGE SEIBEL

The most persistent and consistent of our existent Little Theaters, the one out at the Carnegie Institute of Technology, will put on another play tonight for a week's run. "The Cherry Orchard" of Anton Tchekov has been chosen—and as usual the students will alternate in the cast, to give all an opportunity.

Mr. Seibel

Last month's production of "The Young Idea," by Noel Coward, showed this group hospitable to the airiest sophistication, and the promised Tchekov play delves into the deeper lodes of the heart. E. W. Hickman will direct the Russian masterpiece.

At the Experimental Theater in Aiken avenue, Freeman M. Hammond has been putting on some one-act plays by George M. P. Baird and John Powell, with satisfactory results. The Playhouse at the Hotel Schenley acquitted itself well this week with "Up Pops the Devil," and other Little Theaters are as busy as can be—planning, producing and hoping. If it were not for hope, and the joy that is in every labor of love, the footlights would frequently be dimmed.

EAST LIBERTY 'Y' NEXT

One of the ambitious new projects is being launched at the East Liberty "Y" on Whitfield street, where Oscar E. Norbec will direct a dramatic revue in eight acts and 32 scenes. It is called "Around That Corner," and sounds awesome—for "it depicts life from the cave to the modern skyscraper." It will be no easy job to study and stage this Wellsian outline of history by January 26, the date set for the opening.

In another corner of the city the Sheraden Community Players are engaged in the production of "Americana"—which means plays like Zona Gale's "Miss Lulu Bett" and Lynn Riggs' "Green Grow the Lilacs."

This organization also has a studio group studying the plays of Eugene O'Neill, Paul Green and Susan Glaspell.

The South Hills Community Players, directed by Edward W. Blaine, are preparing "Berkeley Square" for February 21-23.

It is work of this sort that counts.

OUR COMING ACTORS

From such groups may be recruited the coming actors of the American theater. Daniel Frohman once insisted that our stage needs college men. But excepting Richard Mansfield and John Brougham, few of our great actors have had any education except that which they got by playing.

Barrett studied Johnson's dictionary by the light of candle-ends collected from the dressing rooms. John McCullough was an Irish farm boy for 15 years. Joseph Jefferson went on the stage first as "Cora's child" in the old-time thriller "Pizarro." Some of our present-day popular comedians were ushers and program boys in East Side theaters of New York.

Every little theater is a school of acting. And the number of little theaters springing up indicates that there will always be plenty of actors.

Swell Drama On Stanley Screen

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Counsellor at Law," Stanley film, is drama with a big punch, when it comes. And that's not all—the screen version of the Elmer Rice play that starred Paul Muni gives John Barrymore one of the best screen roles he has ever had. Furthermore he gets out of it every bit of the oddles of merit that was put into it by Mr. Rice, for he wrote the screen play, too.

Movement is swift, though the drama is belated, throughout this "Grand-Hotel"-like picture of the activities in the palatial offices of a law firm, one member of which, a former immigrant boy, has risen to top rank of the legal profession. That is the impressive characterization of Barrymore, busy, busy, busy, answering a thousand questions, finding time to do kindnesses, up to his ears in work, then the jolt! An act of humanity has reacted—an unethical alibi threatens his disbarment. Outsmarting the man who would injure him means but brief elation—his wife has deceived him! A call to help another sways him from his own tragic mood—and the "Counsellor at Law" carries on.

Besides the swell portrait by Barrymore, there is nice comedy by Isabel Jewell, as a telephone operator, and a good character bit by Clara Langsner, as the mother of Barrymore. Bebe Daniels has little more than a puppet part as a stenographer in love with her boss, but does it well. Doris Kenyon has the haughty manner that goes with the part of the wife.

There are many other brief characterizations that are of cameo fineness.

In Which the Customers Do the Work

"HERE'S a new slant," writes Paul Please, "on the restaurant business. A fellow by the name of Martovich owned a road stand on the outskirts of New York. The business was absolutely dead, so he did the natural thing. He tried to sell it and get rid of his worries.

He advertised extensively, but it was several weeks before he got his first nibble. The letter came from New York, and Martovich immediately came to town to meet the prospective buyer. The latter man seemed highly interested in Martovich's glowing description of the property and said he would drive out the following morning to see the place.

"Martovich returned home in high glee. It began to look at last as though he were going to get rid of his white elephant. The prospective customer looked like an expert sucker, and Martovich never doubted that the sale would go through.

"But he became thoughtful There was nothing, he knew, like a little insurance. Suppose the sucker showed up with the cash the following morning, and found the place dead? It might not harm the actual sale, he knew, but it certainly wouldn't help. Yes, it would be best to have a little insurance.

"So he phoned his relatives, of which thehe were many. He invited them all over the following morning and assured them that everything was on the house. Then he called his friends, of which there weren't so many, and gave the same story. The only stipulation he made was that they all arrive before eleven o'clock, which was when the sucker was to arrive.

"When the sucker arrived the following morning, everything had worked out beautifully. The combination road stand and restaurant was so mobbed that the prospective buyer had difficulty in reaching the owner.

"'I want to congratulate you,' he said, 'on your business Is this place always so crowded?'

"The owner nodded.

"The prospective customer shook his head sadly.

"'Then I'm sorry,' he asserted. 'I can't buy your place.'

"'But why?' asked the owner frantically. 'You'll make hundreds. You'll make thousands. You'll make—'

"The other man buttoned his coat and prepared to walk away.

"'It's no use,' he interrupted. 'I have plenty of money and all I want is a quiet stand that will enable me and my wife to make expenses. We don't want these mobs!'"

"DEAR Mark:" writes Harvey Budolph, of Baltimore. "In a recent column, your pal, Mr. Walter Winchell, didn't know until now that the government is still paying off the 'veterans' of that war 121 years ago. He wound up with the thought that that is where the high taxes are going. Well, listen to this:

"Gene Tunney, not so long ago, was refereeing a charity match between two husky heavyweights. After the bout, Gene noticed that one of the big fellows wore the button of a veterans' organization.

"'Ever overseas?' asked Tunney.

"The fighter snickered.

"'I should say I was,' was his reply. 'I want you to know that I was gassed over there, and that I draw $100 a month, permanent disability!'" . . .

Keeps Child From Film

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 13.—Radio had a bright idea of putting Adrienne Ames' little girl into the picture, "Finishing School," but Adrienne squelched it in no uncertain terms.

"Barbara is only 9," she exclaimed. "She is in school and later she is going to college. I wouldn't hear of her acting until she is old enough to know her own mind. In fact, I'd like her to be as far away from it as possible."

Ordinarily, the star doesn't believe in children working anyway, unless they have to.

"Of course, in the case of Marlene Dietrich's little girl and the Arlen baby, that's different, because the parents are right on the set," She declared.

Adrienne wouldn't even be photographed with her little girl when Bruce Cabot filed adoption papers.

Woman Wins In Warner

By MARGARET RUSSELL

The strength of a frail woman's love has been known to move mountains, to start wars and to change the destiny of nations. It has been known to undermine the strength of a strong man and to bolster up the courage of a weak man. Many wonders have been attributed to its power.

How such a love developed a happy-go-lucky never-do-well into a marrying man with a sense of responsibility and transformed his shantytown shack into a "Man's Castle" is the theme of the picture by that name in the Warner this week.

Spencer Tracy is Bill, a hard-boiled fellow with an inbred aversion for work, a penchant for sleeping out under the stars and an alert ear trained to the music of rushing train whistles and the calls of birds flying south.

He meets Tina (Loretta Young) on a park bench. She is pretty, homeless and hungry. He feeds her and takes her home with him to Shantytown. Presently, under the influence of love and a woman's deft fingers, the shanty blooms forth in curtains, a new stove and regular victuals on the table.

This unaccustomed luxury gets under Bill's tough skin. He finds himself working now and then to meet the payments on the stove. But the train whistles and the free-winged creatures do battle with the woman's soft, clinging arms which threaten to pin him down. He tries to run away when he learns there is an offspring in the offing, but the woman's frail strength has done its work in an unsuspected soft region of his heart. It brings him back to little "Whoosis," as he calls her. The fadeout finds them respectably married and comfortably winging away in a box-car to goodness knows where. The sound of the train whistles lose their threat to the woman who wins her man in this Shantytown version of "Seventh Heaven."

Baby Rose Marie appears in a bouncing ball screen song feature, Ely Culbertson and his famous wife are seen in one of "My Bridge Experiences," "Transatlantic Bridge Tricks." Fox Movietone News completes the program.

Speedy Revue In Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Speed and the abandon that you find only in a colored show mark "Shuffle Along," which, judging from the initial audience, is attracting half the men in town to the Pitt this week. The brown boys and girls strut as if they like it, and most assuredly yesterday's hardly-even-standing-room house went for them in an expressive way.

In fact, when the Three Brown Spots, modish young men about town, finished their "Terpsichore a la Mode," much of the audience almost blistered its hands.

If you like colored revues, you'll respond agreeably to "Shuffle Along". Even if you don't, Flournay Miller and Mantan Moreland will get your laughs. Their play upon words, their weighty discussions on the intricacies of arithmetic, are effectively done.

Dancing, especially tap steps, are favored by the men, with George Williams clicking a much-as-usual number. Reminiscent of an African voodoo ceremony is another dance, twisted and turned by Valda to the tom-tom beat of Eubie Blake and his orchestra—a dance that could decently be omitted.

Her voice surprising you by being husky one moment, sweet the next, Geneva Washington sings "Chloe" and "The Torch Song" with a mournful quality peculiar to the Negro race. Gay songs are the choice of the Three Sepia Songbirds, as they step and harmonize.

There's an orchestra with the show, too, directed by Eubie Blake, and playing some original arrangements of "Limehouse Blues," "When Day is Done," featuring a well-placed piano solo by Blake, and "St. Louis Blues."

For a finale, "Hottest Harlem on Parade" sways and cries out in a finish of exhuberent speed on the part of the entire cast.

Quite different on the screen is a tale of the tragedy of war, "I Was a Spy," in which Madeleine Carrolle portrays a beautiful Belgian spy discovered by the Germans occupying her home town.

'Voice of Ireland' In School Hall

"The Voice of Ireland," motion picture of talk and sound, covering more than 1,000 miles of scenery, a dramatized interlude composed of episodes in the life of St. Patrick, played the Gate Players of Dublin, principal events of the Eucharistic Congress, and many other views, as well as traditional Irish music, will be presented Sunday, Monday and Tuesday evenings in the Catholic High School Auditorium, Fifth avenue.

Katharine Hepburn Star In Davis, Sheridan

Katharine Hepburn as Jo in "Little Women" is the bright star in the Davis and Sheridan Square, where this calm and peaceful story of the simple lives of four girls, that touches heart more deeply than any turbulent drama possibly could, is now the attraction. In this moving photoplay of the Louisa M. Alcott tale of Civil War times, Miss Hepburn spans the range from the comedy of a hoydenish girl to the drama that comes of heart-break. Jean Parker, Joan Bennett and Frances Dee are her true-to-life sisters in as fine a film as Hollywood has turned out. It is also showing today in the South Hills, Manor and Kenyon.

ONE-POINT WIN OVER PITT THIRD IN ROW FOR DUKES

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Dukes Still Rule Courts. Pitt Loses Hard Fights. Third By Single Point. | Trojans Poor Mudders. Cuccinello to Be Late. Heavyweight Perfection.

While Duquesne University has not yet succeeded in Winning a football game from either of its local college rivals, there can be no disputing the leadership of the Dukes in city basketball. The able Chick Davies, long established as one of the best coaches in the country, manages to keep a step ahead of opposing home mentors, and the 30-to-29 victory over Pitt in last night's thriller puts the Bluff courtmen out in front again in their attempt to add another Pittsburgh championship to the two straight they have already won. In a little more than two seasons, the Red and Blue passers have defeated Pitt four times in a row and have taken three out of four games from Carnegie Tech, playing all eight contests on enemy floors. They have now bagged 21 straight decisions, and have maintained better than a point-a-minute gait with 265 points scored in the six games played this season. Few colleges can boast such a remarkable record. Duquesne's only danger lies in a seeming inability to keep opponents from whittling its lead in the final stages of play.

Chick Davies

It's odd how the Dukes continue just barely to nose out the Panthers. This is the third time in succession they have beaten Dr. Carlson's charges by only a single point. Following a 28-21 score in 1932, the first game last season ended 26-25, the second wound up 25-24, and now a new campaign starts with a 30-29 result. The Panthers must be given credit for spirited fighting and pressing the foe to the limit, even though they haven't yet succeeded in getting a taste of victory. At least they scored more points last night than ever before against Duquesne, though on the other hand the Dukes also reached higher figures than ever before against Pitt. The fans certainly get plenty of thrills every time the rivals clash.

TROJANS NOT BETTER THAN CARDS IN MUD

Ever since Columbia gave the Pacific Coast a headache by grabbing off the Rose Bowl football honors, the fans out there have been grumbling that Southern California would have been a better choice than Stanford to uphold the prestige of the Far West. They're particularly sure they're right because of the conditions under which the game was played, insisting that the Trojans are far superior to the Cardinals in the mud.

The records, however, do not indicate anything of the kind. Southern California has been even less impressive than Stanford on sloppy fields. In six important mud games since 1927, the Trojans won only twice against two defeats and two ties, and scored only 27 points—four touchdowns, without a conversion, and one field goal. In 1927, Notre Dame beat them, 7 to 6, in Chicago; in 1928, California tied them in a scoreless brawl at Berkeley; in 1930, Washington State set them back, 7 to 6, at Pullman; in 1932, they managed to lick Washington, 9 to 6, at Seattle, and in 1933, downed California, 6 to 3, at Berkeley, and were held to a scoreless tie by Oregon State at Portland.

TONSIL OPERATION TO DELAY CUCCINELLO

Tony Cuccinello, of the Dodgers, who has been mentioned in connection with the Pittsburgh club's efforts to swing a deal for a new second baseman, will hardly attain his best playing shape as early as usual, no matter which team's uniform he may be wearing. He is down with a set of infected tonsils, and, as Red Lucas did yesterday, will have to undergo an operation next week for their removal. In previous years, Cuccinello spent the winter in the gym, working with the weights and on the basketball court to keep himself in trim. This winter, enforced idleness due to illness is making him dabby. He had planned to leave next week for Orlando, Fla., home of his pal, Joe Stripp, and this year the training base of the Dodgers, but he won't be able to get into the sun until February and will be longer than usual in rounding into condition.

Tony Cuccinello

But there is reason to expect a big year for Tony, regardless. His drop to a .270 batting average last season was misleading. As a matter of fact, he was without exception, according to Brooklyn critics, the longest hitter in the regular Dodger lineup, and lost a lot of healthy drives that were caught just short of the walls.

PUTTING TOGETHER PERFECT HEAVYWEIGHT

Doping out perfect performers in the various branches of sports being one of the fads of the hour, Harry Tuthill was induced by Sam Greene to try his hand at picking the ideal heavyweight fighter. Tuthill, a veteran trainer of boxers, is now in retirement, but was connected with the glove game for 45 years and saw all the greats and near-greats of that period come and go. Harry says there never was a perfect heavyweight, that none of them had everything.

The veteran would start with ideal physique, taking the legs and feet of Jim Corbett, the torso of Jim Jeffries, the hands of Jack Johnson, which never were hurt, the powerful arms of Jack Dempsey, and the head of Bob Fitzsimmons. Then as to the mechanics to operate the physique: Tuthill thinks Gene Tunney had the best left jab; that Johnson was the best blocker and the finest all-around defensive heavyweight; that Corbett had the most dangerous uppercut and the best footwork, and that Dempsey owned the most damaging right cross. Put all those things together, the old trainer suggests, toss in the fighting instinct of Dempsey, the gameness of Tom Sharkey, and the ringcraft of Fitzsimmons, and you'd have the perfect heavyweight. John L. Sullivan was omitted because it was desired to deal only with Queensberry fighters.

DEMPSEY CLOSEST APPROACH TO IDEAL

Dempsey, on the day he beat Jess Willard in Toledo, is adjudged by Tuthill to have been the closest approach to the ideal. The flaw pointed out in Jack is that he tired over the long route, was trained as sprinter or a dash man, and never learned to rate his pace properly. Corbett lacked a good left jab and couldn't punch. Fitzsimmons was too light and had bad hands. Jeffries was short on courage and disliked the business. Johnson had most of the qualities of greatness, but was just a big, overgrown boy who couldn't take fighting or anything else seriously enough; his temperament was against him.

Jack Dempsey

Tommy Burns had a fighting heart but not enough class. Willard was just a big farmer who couldnt' box or punch and wound up in a circus, where he belonged. Tunney had courage and brains and the greatest left jab of any heavyweight, but fighting fire was none too strong in his makeup.

One of these days something is going to happen to the last half-minute of a basketball game in which Carnegie Tech's Tartans are taking part, and said Tartans are going to land themselves a victory.

The Tartans dropped their second Eastern Intercollegiate Conference tilt of the week last night as they bowed to Georgetown's powerful Hoyas, 24 to 23, in a nip and tuck battle in the Tartan gymnasium. Ahead by a point as the game went into the final minute of action, the game Skibos saw their hopes of beating the Easterners and gaining second place in the Conference go blooie as Connors, rangy Georgetown center, batted the ball through from a scrimmage under the hoop. Temple beat the Plaid in like fashion here Tuesday.

The teams struggled to a 13-13 tie in the first half, Tech blowing an early 5-0 lead as the Hipptoppers rallied midway in the period.

The lead see-sawed back and forth in the second half, with the Techs apparently having the situation under control when Connors tallied his game-winning basket.

Gibson, Tech's brilliant sophomore forward, was the high point man of the tussle, accounting for six field goals and a foul for 13 points. The lineup:

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: TOM THUMB, THE LADY'S MAN—P. T. Barnum's most popular protege, Tom Thumb, was distinguished not only for his small stature, but also for his remarkable strength, activity and vivacity. The little General always received his visitors and patrons with cordial grace, shaking hands and kissing the ladies. In 1844, Barnum took him to Europe, where he remained three years, and in that short space of time he kissed more than 1,500,000 women—accurate count being kept for the entire European tour.

Locatelli Victor Over Jackie Berg

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Cleto Locatelli, swart, chunky Black Shirt from Italy, pummeled Jackie (Kid) Berg, British lightweight, almost at will last night to win a dull 10-round decision before a scant and disappointed crowd of some 6,000.

Only a faint breeze was left of the Whitechapel Whirlwind that was the Berg of two years ago, when the sheer ferocity and persistence of his dogged attack made him the outstanding challenger of Tony Canzoneri among the lightweights.

BLUFFITES ADD TRIUMPH 21 TO STRING

By JESS CARVER

Chick Davies wants to decide these tough basketball games by the toss of a coin. He thinks it would save a lot of time and a lot more wear and tear on the heart and nerves. Maybe it would be a swell idea at that.

Chick's Duquesne Dukes beat Pitt for the fourth time in as many starts last night and for the third time in a row scored by a single point margin. The count of the inaugural city championship series clash last evening was 30 to 29, and was recorded before a capacity turnout of 4,500 citizens.

The victory was the twenty-first in a row for the Dukes, matching the present record of Notre Dame. The Irish, however, likely will pass the locals tonight, as they meet Butler University.

The Panthers, their defensive play unable to check the accurate-popping Dukes, spent the greater part of the evening trying to catch up. The Blue and Gold never entirely succeeded, at least, they never passed the Bluffites after losing a 10-9 lead in the first half. The Panthers made their big mistake in permitting the Dukes to take too many set shots. When those babies are set, they're poison.

Pitt was behind, 10 to 13, at the intermission, and then when Art Feldman went berserk as the second period got under way, found themselves trailing by 20 to 10.

A brilliant rally, engineered by Claire Cribbs and Charley Hughes, enabled the Panthers to slice this advantage to a single point at 21 to 20. The Dukes went to work again on their own hook and piled up a nine-point lead, but from then on, had their hands plenty full in staving off a last gallant attempt on the part of the Panthers to pull up even.

REITER BIG STAR

Marty Reiter, the all-'round star of the game, put the contest on the ice with a foul with two minutes left to play.

The field goal that really won the game for the Dukes was a "sucker" goal. The ball was up under the Pitt basket. Irv Brenner, Dukes' center, had toppled out of bounds halfway down the court when he missed a pass and had not recovered his footing when Paul Birch intercepted a bad pass. Quick as a flash, the latter zipped the ball to Brenner and the former Fifth Avenue High star hooked it in, with the nearest Pitt man, as far as his effective-

The championship campaigning in the City League and among the W. P. I. A. L. quintets was resumed yesterday with few untoward occurrences, the leaders in the City circuit, the pair that saw action, both being returned victors, and favorites generally coming through in the W. P. I. A. L. battling.

In the City League, South, tied with Connelley for the lead in Section 1, walloped Schenley, 36 to 20. Connelley, playing a non-league game, beat W. P. I. D., 41 to 20. South Hills, tied with the idle Langley team for the lead in Section II, defeated Perry, 46 to 25.

In other games, Allderdice downed Peabody, 35 to 19; Carrick won over Vocational, 34 to 25; Fifth Avenue walloped Westinghouse, 35 to 19, and Oliver beat Allegheny, 32 to 21.

Several W. P. I. A. L. fives ran into more trouble than they were led to expect, and two were defeated. Bill Campbell's Homesteaders lost to McKeesport after giving the invaders a tough battle, 34 to 32, and New Castle served the highly touted New Brighton team its second defeat in as many starts, 29 to 28.

Beaver, trodden on by all opponents to date, put up a surprisingly game fight against Ambridge before succumbing, 29 to 13. Aliquippa had its hands full in beating Monaca, 26 to 21.

Other outstanding games resulted in triumphs for Scott over Rankin, 52 to 30; Edgewood over Braddock, 34 to 24; Latrobe over Jeannette, 16 to 12; East Pittsburgh over Elizabeth, 31 to 24; New Kensington over Arnold, 42 to 22; Crafton over Mt. Lebanon, 26 to 20, and Coraopolis over Stowe, 22 to 16.

Just by way of demonstrating that the boys cannot grab off all of the spotlight, Miss Leona Del-Barre, star forward of the East Pike Run High School girls' team, scored 28 out of 41 points as her team defeated Ellsworth-Cokeburg, 41 to 25. She scored 12 field goals.

Feldman, steady and reliable as always, was the high scorer of the contest, with 10 points. Pitt continued its fine work at the foul line, making good on 11 out of 14 tries, Don McCamant sinking five out of five.

TILDEN DOWNS VINES AGAIN

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 13.—Ellsworth Vines bowed again to Bill Tilden at the nets in their Arena match here last night. It was a harrowing exhibition of play, at times nothing short of sensational and at other times an exhibition of too much indifference on the part of the younger player. Tilden, after two hours and 10 minutes of play, emerged the victor by 3 sets to 1. The scores were 6-4, 8-10, 9-7, 6-3.

Tilden's variety was an infinite as a whirling kaleidoscope. He used with terrific force a furious underhand drive known as the Lawford stroke. It traveled too fast even for Vines to time. When Vines did meet the streaking ball in one of these racket charges, it was only to smash it straight into the net.

Bill lobbed with uncanny precision. He cracked backhand returns one bare inch from the court lines.

BETHANY, W. Va., Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Leonard Barnum, high scoring forward of the West Virginia Wesleyan Bobcats, led his teammates to a 31-21 victory last night over Bethany College Bisons.

St. Joseph Lyceum Meets Duke Freshies

The St. Joseph Lyceum team, of Mt. Oliver, will play one of its feature attractions of the season tonight when Buff Donelli's Duquesne University freshmen are met on the Lyceum floor.

In the preliminary game, the St. Joseph Ponies will meet the Trojan Aces. The main game will get under way at 9 o'clock.

PITT, TEMPLE BOXERS MEET

The first leather flies tonight in the Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Conference as the hook and jab experts of Pitt and Temple clash in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion in the campaign's opening match.

The Panther and Owl mittmen are favored to give the defending champions from West Virginia a merry tussle of it for the title; in fact, either of the contesting teams tonight may walk off with this year's laurels. Tonight will be a swell time to get a line on the respective merits of the rivals.

The Catancaro-Giannatti bout in the 145-pound class looms as the feature bout of tonight's card, with the mix between Capt. Jack Shricker, of Pitt, and Eddie Kazanjian, of Temple, also promising plenty of fireworks. The lineup of bouts follows:

Temple.		Pitt.
Rubinstein	115 pounds	Junge
Kleyla	125 pounds	Beers
Feinstein	135 pounds	Konick
Catanzaro	145 pounds	Giannatti
Kazanjian	155 pounds	Schricker

PARKS MEETS COX TODAY

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—While the medalist, Johnny Rogers, of Denver, still set the pace though other favorites toppled, survivors worked through first and second rounds yesterday in the San Francisco national match-play open golf championship.

The long-hitting Denver pro added two victims to his list. He swamped Cliff Groven, of Tacoma, Wash., 8-6 in the morning round, and put out Jimmy Hines, of Great River, Long Island, 5-4 in the second match.

In the list of amazing upsets that followed in the trail of the par-snatchers, the greatest one saw Olin Dutra, of Santa Monica, former Professional Golfers' Association champion, tumble into a second round defeat before the slightly superior stroking of a newcomer to the pro ranks, Oliver Sleppy, of Long Beach, Cal.

Sam Parks, Jr., of Pittsburgh, pro at South Hills Country Club, scored a pair of victories and will meet Wiffy Cox in a lower half, third round duel today. In the morning he eliminated Earl Nagel, of San Francisco, 3 and 2, and in the afternoon he toppled Jimmy Johnson, of Tacoma, 1 up.

Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill.; Leo Diegel, Philadelphia, and Joe Kirkwood, Chicago, were among those defeated.

DIE IS CAST, IT'S LONDOS FOR GINO

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

You might as well give yourselves up, folks. It begins to appear as if Gino Garibaldi, the well-known Italian, like death and taxes, will be with us forever. That is, unless they bring in Jim Londos, the champion, to throw him in the next rassling show here, one week from next Friday night.

Tough old Stanley Pinto, of Nebraska, was tossed in against young Gino at the Arena last night and had the fans with him as he carried the attack to Garibaldi from the start, only to go into the nose dive of all of Gino's foes here. When the time was due, Gino put on his series of body slams and then spread himself out over his foe for the referee's three-second count. It was over in 28 minutes 23 seconds.

FANS WITH PINTO

In the early stages the fans got "on" Referee Dickerhoff for making Pinto break combination headlocks and strangle holds. They wanted to see somebody beat Garibaldi, who was making his fourth appearance in a main bout here this season. They want him eliminated so badly that they ought to turn out in big numbers to see Jim Londos do the job, and that's what is being plotted by the promoters, who are far from stupid. And it isn't because of anything Garibaldi has done here. It's simply because he's been on top too often and the fans want to see some new faces among the headliners.

Hans Kampfer, the German Strong Man, outwrestled the veteran Ray Steele throughout their 45-minute semi-final, but the judges called the match a draw, while the referee's vote, which did not count, went to Kampfer.

MACALUSO WINNER

Len Macaluso, the erstwhile Colgate gridder, was having the time of his life untangling himself from the variety of holds clamped on him by Stanley Sokolis, the former Penn football star, until the latter was stunned as his head hit the floor while he was trying a series of head butts to the body, and Len then jumped on him and won with a fall in 16 minutes 12 seconds.

Frank (Bull) Bronowiecz won with a body fall over Ernest Gorassini in 22 minutes 3 seconds, and Johnny Kline won the nod over Johnny Barran in a 30-minute opener between local talent.

MORGANS MEET PIRATE SIX

CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE

GAME TONIGHT

J. Scott Morgans vs. Pirates, Duquesne Garden, 8:30 p. m.

STANDING OF THE TEAMS

Morgans	1	0	4	0	2
Pirates	1	0	4	2	2
Webers	0	1	0	4	0
Ravens	0	1	2	4	0

SCORES TO DATE

Morgans, 4; Webers, 0.
Pirates, 4; Red Ravens, 2.

The fastest, closest and strongest competition that the City Hockey League has to offer is in prospect at Duquesne Garden tonight when the J. Scott Morgans meet the Pirates in the third game of the season.

The Morgans displayed a sturdy defense and a well organized attack in blanking the H. J. Webers, 4-0, in the league opener, a week ago, and the Pirates were almost as impressive in taking the Sewickley Red Ravens over the hurdles, 4-2, in their first start last Monday.

Tonight's rivals shape up as the league's strongest teams, and the outcome of tonight's game should go a long way toward indicating the eventual winner of the league campaign, which will not be concluded until March 26. The probable lineup:

MORGANS.		PIRATES.
Scully	G.	Rodenbaugh
McSorley	L. D.	McCutcheon
Tyson	R. D.	McGovern
R. Schooley	C.	Davies
Powell	L. W.	Scully
B. Schooley	R. W.	Conley

Morgan spares—Battaglio, Dort, Lampiere, Curl and Jeffries.

Pirate spares—McMullen, Bob Burke, Friday, McGill and Klenz.

CHILLYSAUCE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

With Charles Frederick (Red) Lucas safely in the fold, the Pirate management has many of its aces as good as signed . . . Nashville Red is one of the five-figure boys of the game . . . When the once-prosperous Cincinnati officials were putting out the money, Lucas got in on the ground floor . . . One report states Lucas was generously treated by his Pittsburgh bosses . . . If he plays under a contract as big as the one he received in Cincy he is being treated well.

Other five-figure boys of the Pittsburgh squad, it is said, are Paul and Lloyd Waner, Pie Traynor, Fred Lindstrom and Larry French . . . Throughout the depression years the Pittsburgh topliners have been given better than fair consideration, it would seem . . . There is the true tale of one of the Bucco aces who almost fell out of his chair when he saw the figures of his 1933 contract . . . Heinie Meine was up around the $10,000 mark last season, it was hinted, but Heinie may have to take a cut.

George Gibson has so many promising young players he may have to use a spotlight to keep them in focus when he gets his team on the Paso Robles training grounds. . . Gibby says he is sweet on Bill Brubaker and Ralph Birkofer, and he feels that he will get a case on Catcher Art Veltman, Pitcher Lloyd Johnson, Second-baseman Harry Lavagetto and Outfielder Nick Etten after he gets a chance to study them.

Chick Davies and Doc Carlson missed their callings. . . Both should have been big league baseball managers. . . It is a very difficult thing to give basketball the stature of a major league sport, but with Chick and Doc blending their knowledge and color they have developed the game to a degree probably unsurpassed in the country. . . And that's only the half of it. . . The capacity crowd at the Pitt court last night was infected by the same spirit that animates the coaches and their players. . . Surely here was a major league atmosphere to the setting as the two great teams clashed.

This is supposed to be off the record . . . George (Yatsi) Pasquerelli cashed in on a good-sized bet even as his favorites went down to defeat. . . . The Forbes and Atwood rews king, who shouts harder for Panther teams than anybody in Pittsburgh, found a gent who thought the Dukes were five points better than the Panther and George laid it on the line.

A score of sport celebrities were draped around the shoulders of Jess Carver and the other harassed scriveners as they covered the big battle last night . . . Paul Cuba, of New Castle, fresh from his exploits in the National Football League, was among those present, as was Pete Collodi, former Duke star of the court and grid, who has a crack high school team at West Middlesex, Pa. . . . Tom Burke, Sharon High star of years ago, who also was a featured member at Grove City College, sat in on the big performance.

The local chapter of the Baseball Writers of America has made tentative plans to hold a banquet and entertainment in February . . . Red Lucas and Elmer Layden may attend . . . Bill McKechnie's chances of landing Chick Hafey, Reds' star, appear to be getting weaker. Bob O'Farrell managed and played with Chick at St. Louis and he knows enough about his value to hold onto him unless pressure is brought to bear by his higherups.

By CARL W. SHATTO

As far as the Yellow Jackets, Pittsburgh's representatives in the North American Professional Lacrosse Association, are concerned, it never rains opposition but that it pours, and it rains most of the time.

Last night, at Motor Square Garden, the Jackets met and defeated the Buffalo Indians, 16 to 4. Tonight, at the same arena, Coach Suds Sutherland's stalwarts are to meet the Milwaukee Brewers in a game that will mark their fourth battle of the campaign. The Jackets annexed victories in their first two meetings, but the Brewers pulled out a 11-6 decision here last Tuesday. They have been resting here since that time, and are in prime condition to even the series.

LOCALS TOP LEAGUE

Last night's victory enabled the locals, for the second time in a week, to shake off the Chicago Blue Ribbons and take undisputed possession of first place in the league race. The Ribbons have been matching the Jackets win for win, and it now is rather apparent that it will be these two teams which will fight it out for the championship. The triumph also enabled Pittsburgh to take a 3-1 lead in its season series with the wild and rough Redskins.

Fist fighting between members of the two teams caused considerable excitement and Big Elk, of the Indians, and P. Langevin, of the Jackets, each drew a major penalty. Later in the game Silver Heels, of Buffalo, slugged Referee Corey and he also drew a major penalty.

SILK PLAYS WELL

Ty Silk, of Brampton, Ont., making his debut for the Jackets, played a great game at forward and scored a goal. Jennings led the Pittsburgh scorers with his accurate shooting by garnering six goals. The Vincent to McLean combination worked splendidly with the latter tallying five times, four times on passes from Vincent. Mt. Pleasant, tallying twice, was the only Buffalo player to do so.

Goalkeeper Cordick drew a minor penalty for tussling with Silver Heels late in the third period. The Pittsburgh team scored five times in each the third and fourth periods. The lineup:

PITTSBURGH		BUFFALO
Cordick	G.	Little Elk
P. Langevin	D.	Big Jack
N. Langevin	D.	Big Elk
Jennings	C.	Longboat
Vincent	W.	Silver Heels
LaFrance	W.	Young Deer

Pittsburgh spares—McLean, L'Heureux, Boulaine, Silk, Loughran.

Buffalo spares—Running Deer, Deer Foot.

Referee—Cory.

STOCKS MOVE IN NARROW LIMITS

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Stocks moved within narrow confines in quiet early trading today. Aside from a few scattered soft spots that included some of the tobaccos, the trend was fairly steady.

American Commercial Alcohol, Liggett & Myers B, Reynolds Tobacco B and Columbian Carbon eased major fractions to around a point. United States Steel, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, United States Industrial Alcohol, General Motors, Case and Standard Oil of New Jersey were about even.

Aside from the currency stabilization murmurs at Washington, there were many conjectures in the financial sector regarding the establishment of a "free" gold market here if and when the status of the Federal Reserve's metal is determined.

With most of the hoarded gold recovered since the shelving of the monetary standard, the opinion was expressed that the government now has no important reason for not sanctioning a "free" market. It was pointed out that because of such a market in Great Britain net gold imports to England last year amounted to some $1,000,000,000 whereas gold stocks in the United States declined almost $185,000,000.

Brokerage circles were much encouraged by the substantial rally of corporate bonds during the week. Veteran traders still hold to the theory that a firm bond market is an aid to sound stocks, although this did not hold true in the boom days of 1929 when equities spurted while highest grade maturities held to low levels.

The domestic gold price was again unchanged at $34.06 an ounce and, owing to the currency discussions at the capital, banking circles would have been surprised had the rate been altered. Foreign exchanges firmed moderately in early dealings. The British pound sterling advanced 1¼ cents to $5.09¾ and French francs were up .03½ of a cent at 6.16 cents.

LESS COTTON CONSUMED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Cotton consumed during December was reported today by the census bureau to have totaled 348,393 bales compared with 475,368 during November last year and 440,439 in December, 1932.

Cotton on hand December 31 was held as follows:

In consuming establishments, 1,641,742 bales compared with 1,573,744 on November 30 last year, and 1,530,040 on December 31, 1932.

In public storage and at compresses, 10,313,461 bales compared with 10,411,491 on November 30 last year, and 10,349,811 on December 31, 1932.

Imports during December totaled 14,013 bales, compared with 13,136 during November last year and 10,742 during December 1932.

Exports for December totaled 820,099 bales of lint compared with 915,304 for November last year, and 1,039,795 for December, 1932.

Cotton spindles active during December numbered 24,840,870 compared with 25,423,348 in November last year and 23,799,742 in December, 1932.

WHEAT SLIDES AFTER RISE

CHICAGO, Jan. 13. — Unusual steadiness characterized grain values early today. Absence of selling pressure was an outstanding feature, and was attributed to reports of an expected official pronouncement from Washington regarding future monetary policies. Opening ¼ off to ⅛ up, wheat later sagged somewhat. Corn started unchanged to ⅛ higher, and subsequently eased a little.

STEEL OUTPUT IN SEASONAL UPSWING

By B. E. V. LUTY

After its moderate dip at the turn of the year, street production has gotten into a seasonal upward swing which will hardly assume substantial proportions before the middle of February.

Production of steel ingots was forecast for last week at 29.3 per cent of capacity and for this week at 30.7 per cent. The average of 30 per cent for the two weeks compares with 31 per cent as the average for December of the weekly forecasts, but 33.48 per cent shown by the report of actual production in the month.

In December shipments of finished steel far exceeded the usual ratio to production of ingots, but even the rate of ingot production was 23 per cent above that in November while stocks of ingots, semi-finished steel and finished steel at mills were reduced.

Shipments of steel products by Steel Corporation subsidiaries in December totaled 600,639 tons, or 40 per cent increase over November, while only June, July and August of last year ran higher than December. The year's total, at 5,760,952 tons, was 45 per cent over 1932.

On account of the divergence between weekly and monthly figures for December and the possibility that ingot production is now running above the usual proportion to finished steel shipments it is difficult to determine a rate of activity for the present to which expected improvement should be added to make a forecast, while the time element for each class of improvement is uncertain.

AUTO ORDERS DELAYED

In the next three months the steel trade should gain in activity by five distinct influences. First, final liquidation of stocks of steel and manufactures of steel accumulated during the phenomenal bulge of last summer, and liquidation of stocks of certain products accumulated late in the old year against contracts at lower prices than ruling lately, chiefly in tin plate, wire products and merchant bars. Second, ordinary seasonal improvement, observed every year at this time even in the years of general recession. Third, improvement in general business.

The fourth influence, demand by the automobile industry, is already delayed as there has been much difficulty in getting certain new models into quantity production. December production was far below expectations and the January forecast has been scaled down from 200,000 to 125,000. Even in February the industry will be using some of the steel it stocked in September and October. When things are moving smoothly and the height of the season is reached the automobile industry will engage more than 10 per cent of total steel making capacity, against taking scarcely any steel for more than two months.

The fifth influence is railroad buying. At present there is a note of disappointment in the trade that actual rolling orders are so slow developing. On the program involving purchases of about 800,000 tons of rails, with federal loans, if necessary, contracts have been coming slowly and instructions to roll still more slowly. For material to build and repair rolling stock there has been widespread inquiry but little tonnage has actually been sold. Chances are that within a few months the railroads will be engaging nearly if not quite 10 per cent of steel making rapacity.

MAY HIT 50 PER CENT RATE

It is conservative to expect steel production to cross a 40 per cent rate some time in February and to approach or reach a 50 per cent rate before the time for usual summer lull. Should the average for the half-year be 40 per cent, that would represent a rate of fully 27,000,000 tons a year, half of actual production in 1929, the record year, and 60 per cent of the average rate in the very active period of seven years through 1929.

The quotable market on heavy melting steel scrap delivered Pittsburgh district, jumped yesterday $1.50, to a range of $13.50 to $14. For weeks the market had shown a strong undertone on account of scarcity, but within 10 days past two mills in the district far removed from each other bought small tonnages at $12.50. It became known yesterday that the Pennsylvania Railroad heavy melting steel and scrap rails, about 8,000 tons, brought above $14 from a dealer who sold into consumption at $14.50, and this material may be regarded as worth a premium of 50 cents over ordinary heavy melting grade.

CHAPTER IX.

Anderson and Carroll were near the furnace, kneeling on the floor and examining, with the aid of a flashlight, a little heap of something that looked to me like ashes.

"Hello!" they said together, and Anderson added: "Glad to see you were able to fix it up, Kay."

"What's doing?" I asked, motioning toward the magnifying glass in the inspector's hands.

Anderson laughed.

"For the first time I'm running across one of your detective-novel clues. Nothing more than the traditional ashes and cigaret butts. Even the lipstick is present."

He gingerly picked up one of the burnt cigarets and held it out to me.

"Humph!" I ejaculated, peering at it curiously.

"It's even scented, to make matters worse," added Carroll.

"What's it got to do with the murder?" I began. "Probably they belonged to Mrs. Paige and the maid dumped 'em here."

"Never," answered Anderson with decision. "In a carefully kept house like this, these were never thrown on the center of the cellar floor. No, they really do seem to bear on the murder."

There were somewhere around two dozen of the butts, with a heap of ashes, and they were all carefully piled together in one tiny heap.

"You'll notice that some have the traces of lipstick and some haven't. Seems as though a man and a woman must have waited here for some time—an hour or so, at least."

Asks Secrecy

"We can trace these," I said.

"Easily," agreed Anderson. "The brand is uncommon and the scent on them is good. Don't mention these in any of your stories, will you, Kay? I'd like to work on this angle quietly for a while."

"Anything else down here?" I asked.

"Not a thing," replied Carroll. "We've gone over the whole basement thoroughly. One of the cellar windows is closed but not locked. That might have been accidental. Nothing else seems disturbed."

"Let's go upstairs," suggested Anderson. "I think Mr. Paige is waiting for me. I want to hear his story first-hand."

Ranny Paige was in his wife's little sitting-room on the second floor, a tiny room, exquisitely furnished in rose and gold. There was a table, a chaise-longue piled high with pillows, and wicker armchairs. A canary sang in a cage before a wide window banked with flowers that overlooked the entire Dulaney Valley.

Upon the day-bed where so recently his wife's dead body had rested sat a young man—Randolph Paige. His head was buried in his hands, but he raised it as we entered.

He was a handsome boy, still in his 20's, with curling black hair and magnificent flashing black eyes. A weak face—almost a dissolute one—but it was easy to see wherein lay the charm which he was reputed to have for women. Just now he was haggard with anxiety and grief.

Paige Questioned

"Sorry that we have to make you go all over this again," said Anderson. "I'm Inspector Anderson from headquarters, and these two gentlemen are my assistants. It is very important that we hear your story and that you tell us anything which will throw any light on the tragedy."

"Yes—oh, yes——" murmurde Paige somewhat vaguely. "Though I don't seem to remember exactly what did happen—it seems so long ago—and this is so terrible——"

"That's all right," answered Anderson soothingly. "We won't hold you to a very close account. Just start at the very beginning, will you?"

"Well, I was in Washington all day on business——"

"Exactly what business?" interrupted Carroll.

Anderson looked at the officer, bit his lip with annoyance, and seemed about to speak, when, to my utter surprise, Paige replied weakly and almost evasively: "Oh, I don't exactly remember now—just business."

"You certainly know what business called you to Washington," said Anderson sharply.

"No—yes—I mean—I guess I know—I just can't recall right now." He buried his head again in his hands.

Anderson frowned impatiently but waited for him to recover his self-control.

"Well, leave that point for the present," he said, "and go ahead with your story." But I noticed that he took an envelope from his vest pocket and jotted something down on the back of it.

"I had hoped to get back in time for dinner on Monday night, but I found that I would be detained. So I sent my wife a telegram. It said: 'Am delayed. Will be back late tonight.' After I finished a late dinner I started——"

"Where did you have dinner?" interrupted Carroll.

The color flooded Paige's face. "Surely all this isn't necessary," he began, but Anderson repeated sternly: "Please try to make your story as definite as possible. Where did you dine?"

"At the Occidental. Then I started for home and arrived even later than I expected—about 2 o'clock, I guess. I drove my car to the garage, and then let myself into the house with my door key——"

"Just a minute," said Anderson. "You say that you started for Baltimore as soon as you had finished dinner. But you did not reach here until two o'clock. Isn't that a pretty long time?"

Paige perceptibly hesitated. "I dined very late and I had trouble with the engine coming over. Also a flat," he said finally.

Again the Inspector pulled out his envelope and made a note. "Go on," he said.

"I called my wife's name as soon as I entered the house for I had understood that Mrs. Deane, the housekeeper, would not be here. I didn't want to frighten Sunny. Then I went on upstairs and knocked on the door of this room, which was closed. Still she didn't answer. I thought she had probably fallen asleep, so I rattled the door. Then, after a minute, I opened it——"

Asked About Jewel

He visibly paled.

"You needn't go into that part of it," said Anderson. "But there is one other point. Which route did you take from Towson here?"

"I came down what we call 'the back road.' It's a dirt lane and branches off the main road about a mile out of Towson. It's considerably shorter."

"Then you called the police, I understand?"

"Yes. I cut—my—wife's—body down. I saw at once that she was beyond help but I phoned the police and asked them to send a doctor."

"Why did you call the police instead of telephoning directly to the doctor yourself? What made you think it was a case for the police at all?"

"I didn't think at all," said Paige simply. "It just never occurred to me that Sunny would have done a thing like that herself—we were so happy. I just took it for granted that someone else had done it until Dr. Warner came downstairs and told me."

"Very well," commented Anderson, apparently satisfied with this explanation. "We'll take up another point. I understand that an exceedingly valuable jewel was around your wife's neck when you found her. I want you to tell me all you know about this. Was it on the inside or the outside of her dress?"

"On the outside," replied Paige promptly. "I'm sure of that. I can remember how it sparkled. Sunny's father gave it to her as a wedding gift. It had once belonged to the late Czarina of Russia. Maybe it was once a part of the Russian crown jewels—I'm not sure about that, however."

"And its value?"

No Apparent Motive

Again Paige hesitated and seemed to have great difficulty in getting out his answer.

"Not much, I believe," he replied at last. "Its value to a connoisseur was enormous. But its commercial value I know was small and a thief would have had a lot of trouble in disposing of it."

"But a thief might not know that," pointed out Anderson. "Servants talk, you know, and this may have provided a motive. If the jewel was untouched, however, that doesn't seem to be exactly it, though. Where was it usually kept?"

"Sunny generally wore it," answered young Paige. "But there is a little wall-safe in our bedroom and sometimes it was locked up there."

"And that safe wasn't tampered with," explained Anderson turning to me. And then to Paige: "Now did your wife have any enemies that you know of—anyone who had a motive for killing her?"

Paige shook his head. "Not an enemy in the world. Everybody like Sunny. She was awfully popular."

"Was there anything in her life before you knew her—some disgruntled lover or anything like that?"

But again Paige shook his head.

"How are your servants?"

"Old Peter has been here since before I was born. Mrs. Deane was Sunny's nurse in London when she was a baby, and then returned to her employ as a personal maid shortly before we were married. I can tell you that they are both above suspicion and it's no use to waste time on them."

Synopsis

Beautiful Sonia (Sunny) Paige is found hanging by the silk cord of her dress from the chandelier in her boudoir. Her husband, Randolph (Ranny) Paige, made the grim discovery. Robbery is discounted with the finding of the victim's jeweled pendant around her neck. Suicide is the verdict, but Dickey Carroll, a young policeman, saw a stranger on the Paige grounds the night of the tragedy, and believes the young society matron was murdered. Then, too, the knot in the death cord was an intricate one for a woman to have made. Carroll, unable to get his superiors to re-open the case, appeals to a local newspaper, Kay, the reporter assigned to the case, calls on Sergt. Williams, who, upon learning of the knot, orders an autopsy performed. Anderson puts Carroll on the homicide squad in order to ward off any indiscreet publicity on Carroll's part, but the latter thinks it is a reward. The following morning Kay finds Anderson and Carroll in the cellar of the Paige home.

ROOSEVELT'S THIRD PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN UNSUCCESSFUL

With the beginning of the Twentieth Century Congress and the Supreme Court—obeying public sentiment—recognized the protection of life, health and welfare of the masses superior to the interest of a few. Thus measures for minimum wages, compensation, insurance, eight-hour day, taxation of inheritance, popular election of Senators, woman suffrage, recall of inefficient officials, etc., were considered, gradually passed, marking the march of democracy.

The Republican Progressives backed Theodore Roosevelt, the Conservatives President Taft, splitting the party in the presidential election of 1912, paving the way for victory of the Democratic candidate, Woodrow Wilson. (U. S. History)

DISMEMBERMENT OF CHINA

In the Opium War (1842) against China, Britain gained Hongkong. The opening of ports to European nations was soon followed by penetration and annexation: Burma by Great Britain, Indo-China by France, Amur district by Russia; Japanese warred for Korea, annexation was frustrated temporarily by other powers.

Above: Cartoon from Punch, characterizing fight of Powers for possessions in China. The Boxer Rebellion, fostered by the Dowager Empress (center), aimed at expulsion of foreigners, it was subdued by the Powers (1900). In 1908, the 4-year-old Hsuan T'ung, later Pu-yi, succeeded as Emperor the Dowager-Empress only to resign in 1912, when the revolution established the Republic with Dr. Sun Yat Sen, a farsighted, highly-educated man, as first president. THE PRISONER OF CHILLON

In Lord Byron's (George, Noel Gordon 1788-1824) poem the prisoner narrates the sufferings of a noble character held in cantivity with his two brothers in the Castle of Chillon.

"Three were in a dungeon cast,
"Of whom this wreck is left the last."

Chained, he saw his brothers die and be buried in the dungeon. The prisoner is broken in body and soul when liberated after years:

"My very chains and I grew friends,
"So much a long communion tends
"To make us what we are:—Even I
"Regained my freedom with a sigh."

OXIDATION PRODUCTS OF ALCOHOL—ALDEHYDES, ORGANIC ACIDS

Mild oxidation of alcohols gives aldehydes, vigorous oxidation organic acids. Formaldehyde—a gas obtained by passing methyl—alcohol vapor—over heated copper gauze—dissolves in water, giving "formalin," a disinfectant. Formaldehyde, heated with phenol under pressure in presence of a base as catalyst, changes into hard resin, called "bakelite" after the inventor (Baekeland). This synthetic plastic is used for heat—and electrical insulators, parts of machines and utensils, dental plates, etc. (above left). (Chemistry)

SKY LIGHT

Sunlight is diffused by the air through which it passes, so we receive light from all parts of the sky. The visible sky angle should be at least 5° at any part of the room where we read or write. The amount of light depends upon the nearness of adjacent buildings. Sky angle decreases on lower floors, angle of incidence between rays and window glass decreases too, reducing further the amount of light transmitted. The light may be increased by prismatic glass (lower left) which changes the direction of light.

They Paint a Fearsome Picture

There are two sides to toast and questions.

Very often both sides are scorched.

But even a wet must admire the terrific oral power of a sincere dry. We are envious of the fanatical hate that simmers and boils in the chest of your impassionate reformer.

He is at his best in the middle of his speech when he discards his facts, jettisons his figures and gets down to personalities.

That's when he starts to spread the vindicative butter and makes a neat three-coat paint job of it. When he spears you with that frozen index finger right between the eyes you have as much chance as a grand piano on a circular staircase.

When he gets up and yells you know he means it. When he bounces you begin to believe it yourself. If the drys again grab the powerhouse by the throttle it is because they dramatize their business. Any one of them can talk the lid off an iron kettle and call hogs home from a cattle steamer in midocean.

When they start bellowing, "My friends," you begin to believe that you are an old frenzy of theirs.

When they describe the staggering, dissolute parent, the food-less table, the brutal blows and the glittering barroom, you get a chill up your spine that nickelplates your back collar button.

And we have every reason to believe the boys are sincere. If they ain't, they can spot the Barrymores three more relatives and play them in the Pasadena Rose Bowl. Being a wet of many years' rubberlegged standing we still are forced to hand the oratorical drys the keys to the city of sighs and tears.

Thirty years ago we listened to a teetotalized lecturer describe a taproom souse admiring his blistered face in the bar mirror. As he etched the silly grin, the puffed eyes and purple nose we actually visualized the picture. Then, we wondered how the talker could describe his man so well without the aid of a barroom mirror. Suddenly, we realized he was looking at us all the time he was lecturing and that our pan was as good as a road map to a shipwrecked mariner. So we huffed up in a blaze of dignity and marched out four abreast.

But we still admit that the man was good, knew his subject and could certainly plaster on that roaring stucco. Turn him loose again today, give him room to swing his coattails and he will again have us ankle deep in the burning sands by 1950.

Whether they are right or whether they are wrong they sure can fill the air with teeth, feathers and claws.

The Amazing Extent of Political Parasites in Allegheny County—Comment On Local News

The revelation that one out of every twelve families in Allegheny County has someone regularly and permanently on the public payroll should make people sit up and take notice of the amazing extent of political parasitism. It is incredible that such a large section of the population must be employed to run the local government. Many could be dismissed without loss of efficiency.

As Dr. James N. Rule, state superintendent of public instruction, pointed out in an address at Johnstown Thursday, one of the first branches of the government in which we should get rid of superfluous jobholders is the public school system. Consolidation of school districts, by making it possible to get rid of excess tax collectors, solicitors, auditors, secretaries, etc., would save the taxpayers of the county hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Let the fees unnecessarily collected from the people by school officials in more than 100 independent school districts in the county be saved, and not so much difficulty would be experienced in paying the salaries of the teachers. With useless expenditures eliminated it might be possible to employ more teachers, give each teacher fewer pupils, and thus improve the quality of the teaching.

As things stand now, there is wide and regrettable disparity in the quality of the education given in different school districts. Thornburg, for example, has employed one teacher for every 19 pupils and spent $160.95 per year per pupil. South Versailles, on the other hand, has had one teacher for every 48 pupils and spent $27.14 per year per pupil. Unification of the system would lift the backward districts to a higher level.

Apropos of public education, we are reminded in communications to the Sun-Telegraph this week of one respect in which all the schools are deficient, and that is in the teaching of Pennsylvania history. It is especially important that local history should be taught in Allegheny County because we have a large foreign-born population who are not likely to get the story except through the schools.

But it is not only our foreign-born who need in- struction in Pennsylvania history. We have been reminded by C. Hale Sipe, author of "The Indian Wars of Pennsylvania" and other important historical works, that this month marks the 156th anniversary of the recruiting of the George Rogers Clark expedition to the Northwest, which won Indiana and Illinois from the British. It set out from West Brownsville. Are you familiar with the story?

Do you know how Clark obtained ammunition for his expedition? Did you ever hear of Capt. George Gibson, Lieut. William Linn and the 15 young Pittsburgh men in their command who, eluding hostile Indians and hostile Britishers, made their way from here to New Orleans, obtained 9,000 pounds of gunpowder from the Spaniards by stratagem, and, overcoming the most formidable difficulties, succeeded in bringing it back to Fort Pitt?

The story of the heroic feat of those Pittsburgh youths in 1776 and 1777 ought to be as familiar to every Pittsburgh schoolboy and girl as the story of Paul Revere's ride; but it is not, because New Englanders wrote our school histories and Pennsylvania teachers have not yet wakened to the importance and interest of the great deeds that were accomplished in this part of the country in the early days.

Did you ever hear the story of Drusilla Arbogast, the brave young girl who, on horseback, brought the mail to Pittsburgh one stormy January night years before the building of the Pennsylvania Railroad? Col. Henry W. Shoemaker tells the story in the Altoona Tribune, and suggests that a monument should be set up in Pittsburgh in honor of the early mail carriers and packers of the Alleghenies.

Thanks to Dr. Sipe, Col. Shoemaker and a few others, we are commencing, despite the schools' negligence, to learn something about Pennsylvania history. The Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania, aided by a grant from the Buhl Foundation, is also contributing to our knowledge. We hope the time soon will arrive when Pennsylvania children will know as much about the early years of their own state as they now learn about the beginnings of Massachusetts and Virginia.

Besides education in history, Pittsburgh, it seems, is to have a vigorous campaign of education as to the evils of the smoke nuisance and how to abate it. The campaign will be welcome. Henry Obermeyer, author of the recently published book, "Stop That Smoke!" does us the justice to say that Pittsburgh's air is no dirtier than that of New York and certain other cities; but we cannot deny that, largely because of domestic smoke, there is room for improvement.

A treat is in store for lovers of beautiful pictures in the Gari Melchers Memorial Exhibition at Carnegie Institute, which opened Thursday and will continue until February 18. More than a hundred works of this great American artist are on display. Melchers saw the birth of impressionism and modernism, but was not swept off his feet. His paintings are for the ages.

Half a dozen additional state liquor stores in Alle- gheny County are opening today, and several others will open Monday. A great deal of impatience has been shown over the delay in opening them, but we doubt if anyone has suffered any hardship or great inconvenience. Establishing a hundred million dollar business as a going concern in the short time that has elapsed since Repeal has been a monumental task, and has been well handled.

Councilman Walter Demmler announces he will introduce an ordinance repealing the measure under which persons accused of no crime can be fined or imprisoned as "suspicious persons." It ought, of course, to be repealed. "Suspicious person" has been a convenient charge on which to proceed against criminals when evidence could not be obtained; but it has undoubtedly been responsible for much injustice.

There are interesting things in the lives of our illustrious men with which the average person is not familiar. The American Weekly, distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, has an article in tomorrow's issue on George Washington, in which it is stated that he wrote a tract on etiquette. In the tract are directions for "dunking."

Mickey Mouse wants to get his picture in the paper to please Minnie, and decides the easiest way to do it is to go swimming in the lake when the ground is covered with snow. But the plan did not work out as he expected. Look for the surprise in tomorrow's issue of Puck, the Comic Weekly section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, where you will also find many other first-class funnies.

Missing the Bullseye

That archer's aim has not been true,
His skill, a sorry show.
His shooting, up-to-date has been Too high, too wide, too low.

But with the arrow that remains
He has a chance to try
And hit, with better markmanship,
The target in the EYE!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Saturday inspires a sort of let down in every calling, including columning. For unexplainable reasons columns are more difficult, the mood more melancholy. So as a whipper-up of drooping spirits, I commend this letter, second opened in the morning mail, and bless the writer thereof:

"I have watched this world zinging a gay way suddenly veer from its smooth course and ricochet toward no one knows where! At 40 I have been two years jobless, a zero in the world integer. I lost $114,000 buying bonds a reputable institution assured me were safe. I am without faith.

"From a $7,500-a-year apartment I am writing from a $35-a-month walk-up in Tenafly, N. J. Unless a relative of mine in Illinois pops through with a check by next Wednesday, we—my wife and two small children—will move again. Or hurl ourselves on charity's mercies.

"A fairly sour picture, but without exaggeration. Naturally we are dazed by these lightning shifts but it's astounding how calm. A year ago we passed the crying and feeling sorry for ourselves stage. The resignation to our fate is passive but not dumbly so.

"With myself as well as others there operates a compensatory law when one is squeezed dry of ambition. This long coast down hill was unpleasant but we hit bottom with this bump: We would not want to return to the grandeur, at least grandeur to us, that we left. That is no metaphysical effort. Its something entirely physiological that has taken place in our makeup. As much of a mystery to us as it would be to our acquaintances of the night clubs, afternoon teas and the theaters.

"I'd like to have a job but one of those pace-killing posts with continuous terror of dismissal no longer interests. Something around $2,000 a year would suffice our needs and pay for a little life insurance. Never again can the banking boys entice me with their philosophy of thrift. This same thing that happened to me happened to father and my grandfather. It will happen to the next generation. Humanity's texture does not stiffen. It will always be floccose, pull and ravel.

* * *

"What I dredged out of a fairly successful career, now that we can view it in a cold analysis, was far from a sense of happiness. I was more worried with plenty than I am now with nothing. So I prefer the less traveled road. Out of many friendships, three remained and they have grown fluttery. Staunch friendship is not a thing I care to take up again very seriously.

"It took this walloping cataclysm to teach the fun of nights at home around the parlor lamp, either reading to my wife or listening to her read to me. We are not troubled by those after dark horrors of someone getting my job. We have no interest in what our neighbors think. My wife is quite happy in her 1928 nutria and the shine to my breeches is all right with me.

* * *

"So are mountains reduced to the Biblical molehills by a depression. It's unbelievable how crushed we used to be when we were left out at a dinner party in our set. We were more dispirited when we felt our car would have to last another season than we are now by penny pinching we have to do for my commuting to New York to search for a job that does not seem to exist. We want comfort, but not too much of it, if it entails responsibilities. Heine said life's greatest handicaps are possessions.

* * *

"Most of us were being gorged with velvety nothings. When I used to enlarge and completely refit a sumptuous bathroom, it gave me only a single day's glow. I bought three suits of clothes at a crack. Yet those things do not give me the thrill of calling at a public library and finding a book we wanted was in—this happened today and is fresh in thought. I went home with it under my arms in a sort of Woollcottian skip. Often in other days I ordered a dozen books at a time from our book shop and many pages were never cut.

* * *

"Our amusement life just now is centered on a cross-word puzzle that may win us $10 and balcony seats to a Broadway play. What I'm driving at in all this preamble is this: Write a column some day tipping off those who see a sock coming not to duck. Tell them to stick out their chin. It doesn't hurt much and may knock them loose from such foolishness and into a contentment they'd never expect."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Does Mother Know Best?

There are ructions in the Allen family. Hitherto Mother Allen has ruled the roost. She has ruled it lovingly but firmly, with the profound conviction that Mother Knows Best. And now the three Allen youngsters, ranging in age from 18 to 23, and all working, are disputing that theory.

They say mother's a dear, but she DOESN'T know best. They say that her ideas are old-fashioned . . . that they won't work in this modern world, that she "doesn't understand what it's all about."

* * *

Naturally Mrs. Allen is distracted and indignant. What nonsense to say she doesn't understand! Wasn't she young once herself? Of course, she understands! She accepted her mother's guidance . . . why won't they? What will they amount to if they won't listen to their own mother?

THEY PROBABLY WILL AMOUNT TO MUCH MORE THAN IF THEY DID LISTEN TO MOTHER.

That's a hard answer to give a distressed mother, but it's a true one. The average mother of a modern, working girl or boy knows far less about the world in which she lives than that child.

Grandmother might have known what was best for mother, for life had changed but little since her own girlhood. But the world has moved faster within the last 25 years than within the last 250. This present world is no more like the world of mother's youth than it is like Mars.

Mother wants her girls to "be like she was." She wants them to be as innocent, docile, retiring and sentimental as her mother taught her to be. But the modern girl who tried to enter life with that sort of technique would be doomed to tragedy. Her associates would pity her, her boss would fire her, her children would laugh at her and she'd bore her husband to tears.

Girls, in mother's youth, prepared for marriage. Girls today, prepare for LIFE. It's an entirely different matter. The twentieth century girl knows her world and must know how to handle herself in that world. She must be a CITIZEN as well as a female.

AS A CONSEQUENCE, NINE TIMES OUT OF TEN A MOTHER CAN LEARN MORE FROM HER WORKING CHILD THAN IT CAN LEARN FROM HER.

THE CHILD IS CURRENT—THE MOTHER ISN'T—SHE HASN'T KEPT HERSELF SO.

The working boy or girl of today needs a mother's love, sympathy and understanding as much as youngsters ever needed them. And they'll seek these things IF THE MOTHER HAS THE GOOD SENSE TO ACT THE PART OF THE COMRADE RATHER THAN THE COMMANDER.

YOU'LL GET FURTHER WITH YOUR CHILDREN, MOTHER ALLEN, BY ASKING THEIR ADVICE THAN YOU EVER WILL BY FORCING YOURS ON THEM.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Are you tense in your workaday efforts?

Do you force yourself with speed towards your main objective?

Just plain thoughtless, heedless speed, full of errors and expended physical effort.

You keep your mind ahead of the action in which you engage and have to trust to mechanical accuracy to perform your work correctly.

Your mind is in a speed whirl and at times you are chagrined at the number of mistakes that creep into your work when quantity output is sought.

Your mind has been active but your nerves are on edge, and that main thought of quantity production ruins everything.

Jobs are not easy to procure and you want to make good for the one who employs you, of course.

You have a reputation for faithful energy and interest in whatsoever you undertake.

You are given full credit for these virtues where you are employed but your inaccuracies are working against you.

As nearly as possible, flawless production is desired.

It matters not how much work you turn out if it is not correct and reliable.

ISN'T IT SO?

The character of some men is told the minute they open their mouths.

Folks should make the best of the troubles they already have instead of going around looking for more.

Roosevelt Won't Repeat Wilson's 1918 Blunder

By James T. Williams, Jr.

REGARDLESS of the politics they play, the promises they make, the flights of oratory they attempt, a number of Senators and a larger number of Representatives in Congress will sing their "swan song" at the session of Congress now under way.

For these the current session will be their last, because they will fail either of renomination at the coming primaries and conventions or they will be defeated at the Congressional elections to be held next November.

The terms of all Representatives in Congress will expire before the next regular session begins, on January 3, 1935. So will the terms of one-third of the members of the Senate. Of the thirty-two Senators in this group, fourteen are Democrats, seventeen are Republicans and one is a member of the Farmer-Labor party.

The fourteen Democratic Senators who are up for re-election this year will not find it easy to oppose the Roosevelt administration on any major policy. They will soon be seeking renomination in the primaries or before conventions pledged to the support of the President.

The seventeen Republicans and the Farmer-Labor Senator must determine during the session which of the Roosevelt policies they should support and which oppose in the light of their approaching candidacies for renomination and re-election.

Session Bound To Be 'Political'

ON this account, one-third of the Senate every two years is deeply concerned with the effect of legislative measures on the political future of the 32 Senators whose terms are expiring. And the same is true every two years of the entire membership of the House. In consequence, the present session of Congress is bound to be "political" from its beginning to its end.

For those Senators and Representatives in Congress who owe their elections to the confidence reposed by their constituents in their character and general qualifications for service as national legislators the political problems of the present session will be less perplexing than for those who depend for votes upon their record on this or that legislative proposal. The number of the latter is unfortunately larger than it should be. In fact, considerably less than a majority of Senators and Representatives in Congress today have a strong enough hold upon their constituents to be permitted much freedom of opinion in regard to legislation.

Most of the 32 senators and a large majority of the entire membership of the House will probably face opposition within their own parties for renomination. This means two political tests for each of these national legislators—one within their own party and one against the opposing party. It will be difficult for the President to give much support to senators and representatives in Congress in their coming political contests because he owes his election not only to the Democrats who voted for him but to millions of Republicans who were dissatisfied with the record of their own party in power.

Non-Partisan Support Sought

FURTHERMORE, at the last session of Congress most of the national recovery measures in the Roosevelt program were supported in both houses by senators and representatives on both sides of the aisle. And the President will seek non-partisan support during the present session for such amendments to his recovery program as he recommends, as well as in his effort to straighten out the finances of the Federal Government.

The mistake made by President Wilson in the autumn of 1918 when, while the country was at war, he appealed for the re-election of a Democratic Congress, will not be repeated by President Roosevelt. That mistake was in part responsible for Mr. Wilson's loss of Congress midway of his second term and forecast the defeat of his party in the presidential election of 1920.

President Roosevelt will not jeopardize his legislative leadership by a partisan appeal on the eve of the Congressional elections this year. He knows that his administration must again have the support of millions of progressive Republicans if he is to be re-elected for a second term.

On this account Senators and Representatives in Congress up for re-election this year must face a stern judgment at the hands of their constituents. This judgment will be based more upon their general capacity as legislators with a national point of view than upon the way they vote on any particular measure or group of measures. A Congress thus elected is always stronger than one in which an overwhelming majority is made up of Senators and Representatives who vote with both ears to the ground.

State Lottery Restored in France—Death of the Dalai Lama—Mysterious Tibet

By Edwin C. Hill

THE wheel of history spins round again. We are back in a lottery frenzy not unlike the one which swept Europe and our own Thirteen Colonies in the middle of the Eighteenth Century. France returned to a state lottery this year, with successful results so far as revenue is concerned—also as far as a coal peddler of Avignon is concerned, for he took the latest grand prize of $325,000. A clever swindler came in for another $60,000 by forging a ticket.

France finds now that her government has been violating one of its own laws, passed in 1836, and the powers that be are working out a way to keep the lottery in spite of the law.

Only recently, in England, the Duke of Atholl paid a fine of $132 in a London police court for conducting a lottery by subterfuge. Seeking money for English charities, and seeing most of the loose money flowing over to Ireland, to the Irish Sweepstakes and the hospitals that colossal lottery supports, the Duke invited subscriptions to a charitable gamble invented by himself. But the stern British law stepped in with a curt reminder that the Duke was fracturing a statute framed in 1820.

Lotteries are barred in the United States ever since the great Louisiana Lottery was put out of commission. It took in $28,000,000 a year. Distinguished men, ex-generals of the Confederacy, turned the wheel. But it came to grief because of the small return in prizes, graft and shady stuff generally. Now it hides down in Honduras, though it sells many a slip in these United States under the blushing rose.

Colleges Formerly Held Lotteries

HARVARD, Yale, Brown and Dartmouth used to raise funds through lotteries, and the old city of Albany once financed the Indian wars by this intriguing game of chance. That was about the time that Henry Fielding was saying in verse:

"A lottery is a taxation, upon all the fools in creation. And Heaven be praised, it is easily raised, while fools are so rife in the nation."

The same holds true today, according to Dr. James S. Taylor, mathematician of the University of Pittsburgh.

"Even when the odds are fair," says this man of figures, "the lottery player pits himself against the resources of the world."

We might add to that:

"Not only the world but his wife."

Consider the case of the Frenchman, Charazin, a government clerk. In this year's lottery he said to Madam Charazin:

"I have never taken a chance in my life, but now I am going to before I die."

He invested $6 in a share. Out popped his number for a $3,000 prize. Stopping only long enough to drink to his good luck in bubbling champagne, he dashed home with the good news, only to find that his frugal wife had sold the ticket to the green grocer for $9.

Dalai Lama Passes to Nirvana

FROM the Roof of the World, from the summits of the high Himalayas, the Dalai Lama passes to Nirvana at the age of 57. Three nations, Great Britain, Russia and China, immediately take alarm, for the Dalai Lama, the most remarkable ruler of the times, half king, half god to his followers, millions of Buddhists, was to all Tibet the high justice, the middle and the low, ruling a country which has been a buffer state among India, China and Russian territory. He favored the British. Now that he is gone the foreign offices of three powers are tense and nervous about what his successor will do. For the Russian Bear has coveted Tibet for many long years, looking for that pathway into India which has been Russia's dream for 100 years.

An extraordinary personality, the Dalai Lama, ruling from the Forbidden City of Lhasa the monasteries and ascetics of that land of rocks and deserts, mountain passes and avalanches, cold and ice, with their 500,000 priests. He was the thirteenth vice-regent of Buddha, and the living symbol of a system of philosophic speculation which was in full flower many centuries before the birth of Christ.

Although the ancient Buddhist culture is decadent, the race of holy men, scorning all material things, all things of the flesh, dealing only with things of the spirit, is not entirely extinct. In those high Himalayas they make their perpetual pilgrimage from sanctuary to sanctuary, carrying with them their sublime visions and their spiritual solitude. In those mountains hermits bury themselves alive in tiny cells hewn out of rock, cells so narrow that their occupants cannot move about. They are kept alive only by the charity of the people from the villages down below—little mountain men and women who climb the rocks from time to time and deposit a little food in wooden bowls.

The Fascinating Roof of the World

IT is a mysterious and fascinating world, this Tibet, this land called the Roof of the World. All spiritual and material values are turned upside down. There one lives in an atmosphere unreal and magic, against a fantastic background of the strangest mountains the human eye ever beheld. There one is surrounded by silence impenetrable and solitude almost appalling.

Over such mystics and such a land the Dalai Lama ruled for 40 years as the reincarnated spirit of the Lord Buddha. The western world first had news of him 25 years ago when Col. Sir George Younghusband broke through the Himalayan passes with a British column and occupied the Forbidden City.
